Breach of Contract – Baskin

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

Pen Baskin, one of three B.C. mediation commissioners destined to lose their jobs, bitterly attacked the new NDP government Tuesday night for what he terms an outright breach of contract.

And John Parker, chairman of the commission, questioned the attitude of Premier Barrett who, he said, treated the matter lightly during a television interview.

He said that Baskin and third commissioner Allister Pollock, like himself, were not appointed for political reasons and had left important jobs to sit on the commission. He said Barrett had shrugged off their fate with a remark that they had been well paid.

"You just don't say: 'Well, get lost,' " Parker said.

The main feature of the new government's proposed amendments to the act is the decision that the chairman and commissioners be "removed" and the commission dissolved.

Since it was created by the Social Credit regime of W. A. C. Bennett in 1968, the commission and its compulsory powers have been under constant attack from organized labor.

Unions have generally boycotted it and on more than one occasion the act that created it has been blamed for serious confrontations between labor and government.

The NDP had said prior to its Aug. 30 election that it would repeal the compulsory features of the act, but the

The first session of the 30th B.C. Legislative Assembly opened Tuesday amid criticism that the NDP government lacks imagination and is contributing to inflation while failing to meet the challenge to create new jobs throughout the province.

Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, following the reading of the speech from the throne by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson setting out the government's legislative program for the fall special session, told reporters the NDP wasn't proposing to do enough for the aged and handicapped and had failed completely to come up with new measures designed to create employment.

Bennett said the bill to establish a $200 monthly minimum income for everyone over 65 "should have been $225" as proposed last June in the Kelowna charter put forward by his Social Credit administration.

The former premier also claimed an industrial development corporation, similar to the one which he had planned to set up with $50 million in government surplus funds, was needed immediately to fight unemployment this winter.

"Unemployment is very bad in our province," Bennett said, "and it will grow worse each month under the NDP policy of no growth, which will mean less jobs.

"Since the NDP came to power this government has done nothing but (put) the heavy hand of state socialism over the whole economy. It has reduced the value of everybody's shares.

Remember not only the rich but ordinary people own shares and these values have been reduced by tens of millions of dollars already. The NDP policies will reduce jobs by the hundreds and the thousands.

"I prophesy the labor leaders will soon see what they bought in the election. The labor leaders in this province

Trudeau on Canadian Control:

Too Soon To Get Tough

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday conditions may be ripe in about five years for tougher government measures to exert Canadian control over the economy.

He said in a question-and-answer session following a Junior Board of Trade luncheon that this is a difficult time for Canada to be "hard" on foreign investment because of the necessity to create jobs.

In the evening, Trudeau told upward of 15,000 cheering supporters at Maple Leaf Gardens that the goal of his government is a harmonious equilibrium embracing all regions of Canada.

He also pledged to work for a "social order reflecting human values" if the Liberals are returned to power in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Observing that Canada has a technical frontier, a geographic frontier and a social frontier, the prime minister declared: "We have in 1972 a chance to bring it all together."

At the $7.50-a-plate luncheon, Trudeau told a questioner that at another point in time, the government might find it easier to practise economic nationalism. It might even decide to slow down the rate of foreign-financed mineral exploitation advocated by former Liberal cabinet minister Eric Kierans.

This point may be reached in about five years, Trudeau said — after the job-creation problems caused by the post-war baby boom have been solved.

The government introduced a bill in the last Parliament to screen foreign takeovers of larger Canadian corporations.

The legislation died when Parliament was dissolved.

Among the entertainment groups helping to set the stage for the prime minister's 20-minute speech was The Crowbar, a rock ensemble said to be a favorite of his wife, Margaret.

In the House: Business as Usual

It's Rump Session Behind TV Crews

Nicholson
Vice-regal top hat ...

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

Take the opening of the 30th B.C. Legislature in a special sitting Tuesday afternoon as an example.

In a booming voice one of the clerks of the House signals the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, a CBC television crew comes in backwards.

Not quite the way it was done in the old days. It's hard to catch the significance of tradition and its meaning to culture while watching the rear end of a cameraman scurrying into view.

Things began warmly under the hot house lights set up for live TV coverage as Premier Barrett walked over to Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett and clasped his hand.

It was the first meeting of the two leaders since their roles were reversed in the Aug. 30 election and both appeared happy with small talk probably inspired by TV cameras and a packed public gallery.

Later the two men were back in their more common

Price of Drugs 'Mind-Blowing'

SASKATOON (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis renewed his campaign against the "corporate rip-off" Tuesday, blasting the drug industry for mind-blowing prices.

"Canadian drug prices are completely unrelated to reality.

"Instead, the firms charge whatever they think they can get away with," he told an NDP rally of about 1,700.

It was the first event of a week-long Lewis tour through Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Lewis blamed the high drug prices partly on the firms' advertising expenses.

"For every dollar you spend on drugs, 30 cents of that dollar is spent on advertising and promotion."

He said the industry spends $5,000 a year for every Canadian doctor to convince physicians to prescribe their brands.

The difference between the bulk prices and the prices paid by consumers was "mind-blowing": from 1,100 per cent to almost 1,500 per cent.

Lewis prescribed a three-step cure for high drug prices:

- Set up a crown corporation to produce generic drugs and sell them at prices just high enough to pay for production and rearch.
- Set new consumer regu-

Signal Picked Up In Alaska Search

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A massive air search for House Majority Leader Hale Boggs and three other men missing in a light plane on a rain-swept flight from Anchorage centred Tuesday night in the Juneau area with hopes that some brief, emergency beacon signals might be coming from the aircraft's special equipment.

Darkness, however, forced most of the search planes to return to their bases for the night.

The signals from an emergency locator beacon like the kind that was installed in the Cessna plane for the flight from Anchorage were heard three times Tuesday afternoon by a helicopted sortie.

Pilots of two coast guard jet-powered helicopters said they picked up a signal for about 40 minutes beginning about 2 p.m. PDT, 10 miles west of Juneau.

Another signal lasting about 30 seconds was later picked up by the helicopters, pilots said, but was quickly lost.

Yellowstone Idea Went Out to World

What does an unspoiled area need to win the title national park — or even equivalent reserve? From one national park (Yellowstone) in one country (the U.S.) 100 years ago, the world now has 1,422 parks and equivalent reserves in 101 countries. The nature, and the implications, of this dramatic growth are outlined in an important environment series — commencing today on Page 5.

Troops in Ulster Battle Both Sides

BELFAST (AP) — The three-cornered violence dreaded by British authorities broke out Tuesday night in Belfast as soldiers fought Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists in separate gun battles. (See story, Page 3).

Army headquarters said soldiers fighting a "war on two fronts" claimed to have killed or wounded at least 10 gunmen. Twelve policemen and troopers were wounded, according to the army.

Police said two persons, a man and a woman, were shot dead in the fighting that raged simultaneously in major Protestant and Catholic enclaves.

The confirmed dead took Northern Ireland's three-year death toll to at least 613. Ten persons have died in the last five days.

The British troops, one military source said, were "the meat in the sandwich," fighting guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army on one side and guerrillas of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association on the other.

Most of the previous shootings had been between British troops and the IRA.

'Rump Session' Opens B.C. Session

roles of verbal sniping at each other as the Social Credit opposition used every chance that came its way to stall NDP plans of getting only the business it wanted to deal with out of the way.

When the incident of the two men beaming and holding each other's hand was over and the sniping began, one veteran journalist was heard to say:

"Welcome to the B.C. Legislature ladies and gentlemen. It's back to business as usual."

Liberal Dave Brousson (North Vancouver, Capilano) was the only MLA to miss the opening ceremonies.

His leader, David Anderson, said Brousson was in Europe on a business trip planned about a year ago but would be back for today's sitting.

There was humor too.

Former mines minister Frank Richter moved a Social Credit amendment to deal with the throne speech immediately and Socred Dean Smith seconded the bid.

Then there were red faces as Speaker Gordon Dowding told Richter the amendment wasn't signed as it should be.

Later, when the amendment was put to a vote and the four Liberal members present joined with Social Credit in favor of it, Bennett quipped that this was the "new coalition" in B.C. politics.

The amendment was defeated 39 to 14.

And after his first taste of life in the Opposition benches, Bennett was at his vocal best for newsmen:

"That was democracy at its best.

It's just wonderful that a person can have been elected to represent a single constituency in 13 consecutive elections and as premier in seven consecutive elections.

"That was the miracle, not that we were defeated."

The public gallery watched most of the proceedings in a muffled yawn but Dowding provided chuckles as he was called to be sworn in as speaker.

Former Liberal leader Pat McGeer and NDP MLA for Prince Rupert Graham Lee snatched Dowding from a seat in the house and brought him forward with the gusto of a pub bouncer evicting his 100th customer.

After the opening session it was time for tea with senior citizens in the customary party at the Empress Hotel.

About 1,000 senior citizens were on hand to meet Barrett and other NDP MLAs but as one non-partisan observer put it, "they're the same old faces here."

This year there was no orchestra in the ballroom tea party and no invitations — just an open house.

Barrett planted himself at the entrance to shake hands or kiss those willing but later did a circle tour among the throng with cup of tea in his hand.

By 5:15 p.m., Barrett had slipped away into an elevator and up to his suite in the Empress.

And as one eldery woman put it, the "sturdy little man" had weathered enough for one day.

lations limiting costs and promotion by private firms.

● Require that all prescriptions cite generic names — not high-priced brand names.

"The NDP would give the drug corporations an incentive, indeed, a compelling reason, to compete by setting the pace with a crown corporation whose motive would be people profits, not corporate profits."

Lewis also took a swipe at the big food chains and their processors, packagers and distributors.

He said agriculture department figures show processors and dealers account for 64 per cent of the $2.8 billion increase in food prices since 1961. Farmers took in the other 36 per cent.

Gorde Hunter His Blind Eye

IT OCCURS TO ME . . .

That David Lewis, while gathering mounds of publicity with his corporate bums allegations, has not said one word about such rip-offs as the automobile industry — Chrysler, Ford, General Motors — using our money to finance the industry in Canada. And, of course, there is a reason. They use 17 per cent of our money for such financing and Lewis says nothing because the automobile workers of Canada are bent on achieving parity with their brothers in Detroit. Lewis stays away from any charges knowing that 17 per cent is vital to the union demands. So his case collapses as a result of his closing eyes to a rip-off that is as big as anything he has blasted . . .

Barnes said it was a question of principle — that he could not go through with the job because of the apartheid policies of South Africa.

This, I suggest, is a lot of manure. Barnes was given a job to do by the premier. That job should have taken preference over his own racist feelings — because that's what they were — and besides, how did Barnes know what feelings the two South African players have re their country's policy of discrimination? Arthur Ashe is black, yet he sees nothing wrong in competing in the same tournament with the two South Africans.

Arthritis Tough Foe

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I enjoy your no-nonsense, unequivocal answers which I find very informative.

I am in my mid-60s, and about 20 months ago found that I couldn't get up from bed without severe pain in the lower back.

X-rays disclosed sacral-lumbar arthritis, but I comfort myself with the knowledge that it isn't the crippling kind, and I know that few of us escape the ravages of time.

I use an electric heating pad in bed and in back of me when viewing TV. It is mildly helpful.

I don't walk as much or as rapidly as formerly, particularly when each step causes pain. On other occasions, although I am conscious of stiffness, I keep walking so I won't become immobilized.

I would like to try either diathermy or sonar-wave treatment. I know this is only a palliative, but I understand the heat penetrates deeper.— M.B.B.

Thank you for appreciating my unequivocal answers. So I shall now equivocate.

I just don't know whether diathermy or sonar will help. It is true that the heat penetrates deeper. That's the purpose of those methods.

This heat will not correct the changes in bone shape that have occurred, but like any warmth, it will soothe and relax muscles which often become tense when you have arthritis. So all I can say about these methods is: try them. See if they help. But don't expect more than you can reasonably expect to gain.

You show a pretty sane attitude toward arthritis. Keeping joints flexible, even if it hurts, is vastly more sensible than letting them stiffen and become more or less useless through lack of movement.

At the same time, in your particular type of trouble, it is not too unusual for the pain to disappear after a while because of further changes that may take place in the joints of the spine.

I have no doubt your doctor has given you some guidance on what type of activity or exercise will benefit your back without harming it — and medication can make it less painful.

There's one other thing I'd suggest. Your pain is worst when you first get up in the morning. It may be because your mattress is too soft and doesn't give quite enough support while you're asleep.

'Granny-Bashers': U.K. Urban Terror in Skirts

By CAROL KENNEDY

LONDON (CP) — A bizarre and frightening new phenomenon of urban violence is haunting British streets—the girl mugger.

Increasing assaults by teenage girls—usually in twos or threes and often from prosperous, middle-class homes—are being reported in newspapers. Police estimate there are several dozen gangs of girl muggers.

In a recent incident, a 25-year-old school teacher was attacked by three teen-age girls as she waited at a suburban bus stop. The girls stole her watch, tried to pull rings off her fingers, took her money and kicked her face viciously, leaving her bleeding on the sidewalk.

One of the assailants lived in a £25,000 home in Hayes, a middle-class dormitory area on the fringes of London. Her mother said the girl lived a normal life until she began hanging around with local hippies.

In another case, two 17-year-old blondes, one armed with a flick-knife, the other with a spike, forced another girl of 17 to hand over her leather jacket.

Most girl muggers concentrate on female victims, particularly the old and vulnerable. They refer to it as "granny-bashing."

Police are worried about this new development because girls, using wigs and makeup, can disguise themselves more effectively than their male counterparts.

Until recently, girls were rarely accused of assault or crimes of violence. Their role in gang activities was usually to act as decoys, luring victoms to the attack.

One scientist who has studied the problem relates it to the general female bid for equality.

Girls who have grown up in relatively sheltered homes now freely roam the streets, just as boys have always done, says Prof. Trevor Gibbens.

"It is a natural result that, in becoming equal, they have become equal in all areas, including violence."

Thomas Hart, director of a remand home in southeast London, says the girls feel little guilt. Their attitude is: "I need, I want, I must have."

About one-third of those sent to his establishment are on drugs, he says, but there is a trend towards alcohol as well.

Hart says another factor is hatred of impending womanhood with all its implications —"becoming like mum, with the old man's dinner to worry about," as one girl expressed it.

British Army Odd Man Out

Protestant Fuse Is Lit

BELFAST — Protestant militancy reached fever pitch in Northern Ireland Tuesday, with hardliners charging British troops with murder and the Ulster Defence Association threatening to mount guerilla warfare against them.

UDA vice-chairman Tommy Herron told correspondents that the para-military organization's leadership will meet soon to decide whether they should carry out full-scale guerrilla warfare against the troops.

"We may have to go on the offensive against the troops," Herron said.

Minor confrontations between gangs of young Protestants called Tartans and British troops have broken out several times during the last few weeks. But last night they exploded into a full-scale riot.

The rioting and gunfire spread to other Protestant areas in the capital and a Catholic church and school were burned.

The latest crisis threatens to turn the province's troubles into a three-sided guerrilla war among the Irish Republican Army, the Protestant UDA and the British security forces.

The tough talking from the Protestants followed a night of rioting in Belfast that left two Protestants dead and scores of others injured. A dozen soldiers were among the casualties, four of them suffering gunshot wounds.

Monday night's rioting followed weeks of simmering discontent in Protestant areas against what residents consider the British government's failure to contain the IRA guerrillas.

Martial Law 'Protects' South Korean Citizens

SEOUL (UPI) — President Park Chung Hee proclaimed martial law throughout South Korea Tuesday in a surprise move he said was necessary to protect the nation from "unfavorable changes in and around the country." He said the people must approve his plans for constitutional and political reforms if talks with communist North Korea on reunification are to continue.

Park's announcement came at 6:4 5p.m. (2:45 a.m. PDT). Martial law went into effect 15 minutes later and soldiers in armored vehicles took up positions around major buildings in the heart of Seoul.

The former army general who came to power in 1961 and is serving his third term as president suspended the constitution, banned all political activity, and named army Chief of Staff Gen. Roh-Jae Hyon to execute the martial law edict.

Park told the nation that amendments to the 1963 constitution he helped draft would be announced by Oct. 27 and submitted to a vote of the people.

Chilean Copper Freeze Sparks Counter Action

ROTTERDAM (UPI) — The Rotterdam district court has issued a confiscation order for all the Chilean copper aboard the German freighter Birte Oldendorff. The order was made at the request of the Kennecott Copper Co., court sources said Tuesday.

The court said the copper could remain on board ship, and the ship could leave Rotterdam Harbor. But, the court said, if the copper was unloaded it would be confiscated.

Trade union representatives said they would meet later to discuss the court order, which was issued Monday night.

The freighter's shipbrokers said they would not unload copper which had originally been destined for Le Havre.

And in Paris, four major copper producing nations called for "measures of solidarity and defense" Tuesday to flight a French court order freezing payment on a shipment of Chilean copper.

The four nations — Chile, Peru, Zambia and Zaire — members of the inter-governmental Council of Copper Exporting Countries (CIPEC) called an extraordinary conference of ministers of the organization next month in Santiago, Chile, to decide on action to take.

The CIPEC decision comes after Braden Kennecott Corp. of the United States obtained a court order embargoing payment by French buyers of a 1,250-ton shipment of Chilean copper.

Closer to the Mark

THE RUNNING ARGUMENT between Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Stanfield on the job-creating performance of the government is becoming labored. It is to be hoped the two soon will tire on the subject and find second wind on the real issue.

The attempt by the Liberals to gain ground on the question of jobs had to be challenged. But enough's enough.

Perhaps it would have been better for Mr. Trudeau if he hadn't followed what, no doubt, was the advice of his election strategists in claiming credit for new work opportunities that have shown in the past four years. The prime minister's boast that his government was responsible for more than one million more jobs since 1968 was immediately branded as "an outright lie" by Mr. Stanfield. He accused the prime minister of "exaggeration" and "misrepresentation."

The prime minister came back with what he claimed are Statistics Canada figures to puff out his boast, and was deflated somewhat by the Conservative leader's reminder that there are many seasonal jobs and seasonable variations which, when taken into account, bring the "over one million" claim down to something like 841,000 new openings on the labor market.

What Mr. Stanfield might have swung harder at is Mr. Trudeau's taking of credit for all of the new work opportunities that have arisen. It is surprising that there have been as many as 841,000 in view of the policies that the Liberal government has been following.

What the actual number is may be contained in the annual report of the Economic Council of Canada which was due to be published last month but which the government has delayed until after the election. Mr. Stanfield is unlikely to get an answer to his questioning of why the release of the report has been pushed into November. It looks suspiciously as though its contents could puncture the prime minister's balloon with a bang although hasn't this happened already?

Hasn't 7 per cent unemployment done the deed? This is where argument should be concentrated. Let the Liberals take credit for creating any number of new jobs. But the fact remains that the number comes nowhere near the increase in the labor force.

Mr. Trudeau isn't changing his inflation-fighting game plan even though it is a loser, and Mr. Stanfield would well be advised to ignore the meaningless Liberal boast and press his solutions to the miserable employment situation that exists and could grow worse.

Basically, the Conservative plan is to cut taxes to stimulate consumer spending. This, it is argued, would increase production and economic activity generally. And the result would be more jobs — maybe in number that would be closer to the labor force mark than Mr. Trudeau's "more than one million."

Liberal Lure for Toronto

WHATEVER MITCHELL SHARP may say to the contrary, a federally-financed park on Toronto's waterfront is an election "goodie" to top all such goodies. The proof is in the timing of the announcement, 13 days before the vote. It is also in the planning of the 86-acre park without consultation with the Ontario or Toronto governments.

The external affairs minister, who shared the joy of making the announcement at a press conference with his colleagues the labor minister, the science minister, the energy minister and the communications minister, explained that the federal government initiated the project without consulting the provincial or municipal authorities because it was a last chance to keep a "ceramic curtain" of highrise buildings from blocking off the waterfront permanently.

He talked as if that ceramic curtain were going to rise along the 86 acres next week or next month, which is nonsense. The obvious truth is that the park, with outdoor and indoor sports and recreation facilities, bicycle paths, boating accommodation and the like, at an initial estimated land cost of $30 million and who knows how many additional millions later, is a one-sided effort because one side wants all the credit. It is a bid to hold the Liberals' seats in Toronto — at the expense of all Canadian taxpayers.

It may be argued that it is in the best interests of the whole country that Canada's cities be made better places for living, and few will quarrel with the proposition that the federal and provincial capitals, for instance, should be showplaces with the aid of federal and provincial funds.

But if the federal Liberals are re-elected, the lakefront park in Toronto will set a precedent that may be an acute embarrassment to the government in the ensuing years.

For if it is right that a strictly-federal park on a grand scale should be provided for the citizens of Toronto, can the Ottawa government justify the exclusion from such largesse of Vancouver, for example, or Victoria on a smaller scale (but with a need just as crying) or any other Canadian city with a waterfront to save and improve?

It is only a short time, one may recall, since Victoria had a hard time acquiring federal waterfront land for a park at much less than the commercial market value.

Bantustans Inadequate — Coloreds Have No Home

South Africans Nervously Studying Safe Alternatives to Apartheid

By STANLEY UYS from Cape Town

Most white South Africans, if they were asked to pass judgment on the unitary state that was created in 1910 when the four provinces — Transvaal, Orange Free State, Cape and Natal — were brought together, would say it had failed.

Certainly, this is the verdict of the three major political parties in the country — the ruling Nationalist Party, and the two opposition parties, the United Party and the Progressive Party. They all agree that South Africa has not succeeded in welding its four million whites, 15 million Africans, two million Coloreds (of mixed-race descent) and 700,000 Indians into a single nation.

John Vorster's Nationalist Party has proposed, as its solution, the policy of apartheid or "separate development". The plan is to create at least nine Bantustans or "homelands", based on the remnants of the African tribal lands, and to make every African in South Africa, whether he lives in a Bantustan or not, a Bantustan citizen.

The Bantustans have all been promised independence, which means their citizens, even if they are born and work all their lives in a "white" urban area, will be foreigners in the whole of "white" South Africa. They will carry the passports of their respective Bantustans or ethnic homelands.

The flaws in the policy are obvious. The most important is that the Bantustans cover only 13.7 per cent of South Africa's surface area, and that generally they are impoverished areas of subsistance farming, incapable of supporting even their existing populations — just over one-third of the 15 million Africans. Although the Bantustans have been promised independence, therefore, economically they will be dependent on white South Africa for the foreseeable future. Political sovereignty is thus meaningless to them.

The remaining two-thirds of the African population will continue to work on white farms and in white mines, industries, etc., but as a rightless, rootless proletariat. A more explosive situation it would be difficult to imagine.

It is this policy which is breaking up now, as one by one the Bantustan leaders start to show up the shortcomings of the system. Their tactic, simply, is to point out that their land area is inadequate and to demand more.

Mr. Vorster's government is unable, of course, to give them more land, as it would mean taking it away from white farmers. Politically, this would be suicidal.

The "separate development" policy, as it is applied to the two million Colored people, is in an even bigger shambles. The Africans, at least have homelands, but the Coloreds have no separate geographical areas (apart from their segregated residential townships). The whole community hangs in limbo. Mr. Vorster himself has said he cannot see the end of the road for the Colored, and that future generations will have to find a solution.

The government-created Colored Persons' Representative Council meanwhile is in uproar. The Federal Party, which supports separate development, clings to its control of the council by a slender majority of one. If control passes to the Labor Party, which opposes separate development, the council will have been rejected by the Colored themselves.

With the Nationalist policy in ruins, the two opposition parties have again been prompted to offer their own solutions, each of which, significantly represents a switch to federalism.

The small Progressive Party, which has one member of Parliament (Mrs. Helen Suzman) and advocates a qualified franchise, envisages a multiracial federal assembly and a number of new multiracial autonomous provinces, some of them based on the Bantustans. The central assembly will handle only those matters of importance to all the constituent units, subject to built-in checks (including a watchdog multiracial senate) to prevent one race group dominating another.

The provinces, it will be noted, are to be multiracial — in other words, they will be smaller versions of the multiracial state as a whole. The Progressive Party accepts that all the races cannot simply be poured into the same melting pot immediately, but it hopes that through its qualified franchise, and the checks and balances in the federal structure, it will gradually be able to build up a united, multiracial country.

The United Party, which holds 47 seats in parliament (against the ruling Nationalist Party's 118), takes a less optimistic view of the preparedness of whites to share multiracial provinces or units with blacks, and its federal proposals take a different forms.

It has a highly complicated plan to establish a multiracial federal assembly with no fewer than 15 constituent assemblies — four for whites (based on the existing provinces) two for Coloreds, one for Indians, and eight for Africans (based on Bantustans and on Africans in the urban areas).

The idea is to let each race group govern itself as far as practical. Each legislative assembly will be represented in the federal assembly by its own members. The federal assembly would have about as many members as the present white parliament — 166. It would be loaded in favor of the communities with the highest productivity and income: that is, initially, the whites.

The United Party says that, unlike the Nationalist Party, it believes sincerely in a shared society, but it insists that unless the white electorate can be persuaded that their interests will be protected they will not buy the policy. This protection is offered in two ways: whites, for some considerable time, will be the majority in the federal assembly; and the present all-white parliament will decide which powers to devolve to the Federal Assembly and when.

The United Party argues that the reality of South African politics is that power resides exclusively in the hands of white voters, and that if they think a policy is too liberal they will reject it. The alternative then will be to continue with the present collapsing apartheid policy.

This quickening activity on the party political front indicates that the next general election, due before mid-1975, will be a crucial one. The United Party, infused with new hope, is undergoing a process of rejuvenation, and hopes to make deep inroads into the Nationalist Party's majority at the election. It realizes that if it fails to make this progress many opposition whites will lose heart and will be inclined to throw in the towel.

The Nationalist Party, for its part, has no positive policy issues on which to fight the election. It can only play on the racial fears of its supporters and tell them that the United Party's policy will mean the end of the white man in Southern Africa. This move to rekindle the flames of Afrikaner nationalism is their bedrock strategy and they believe it can work again. It is all they have left. If they cannot rally their Afrikaner supporters into the laager this time they are lost.

That is why, although the election is some distance off, more and more emotionalism is creeping into political speeches, and cabinet ministers are quite unashamedly conjuring up all the Afrikaner's primeval fears. Neither they nor anyone else knows just how far the Afrikaners have been denationalized. If enough of them have shed the nationalism of their past then the Vorster government is on its way out. But it is a big "if".

The Ruthless Men

Colombia's 'Green War' Exercise in Savagery

By TIMOTHY ROSS from Bogota

Ruthless struggles in Colombia for control of the market in illicitly-mined emeralds have led to army intervention. In the brutal competition among prospectors and heavily-armed smugglers more than 250 have died, 93 since May.

Known as the "Guerra Verde" — the Green War — its battlefield is near to the state mine at Muzo, only 100 miles from Bogota, capital of Colombia. Colombia produces over 90 per cent of the world's gem-quality emeralds, the government running two of the three mines, trying to regulate the sale and, through the Colombian Emeral Company, trying to control the market and keep prices up.

But with the possibility of a lucky find as the only chance to break out of their miserable poverty caused by unemployment and illiteracy, illegal prospectors or guaqueros follow the rumors of new emerald veins like vultures after a dying horse. When sizeable finds are made the word spreads and within days hundreds arrive with their children to pan through the dirt in rivers and streams.

If they are not found by the police their problems begin when they try to take their finds into a city to sell, for the smuggler gangs wait in ambush on the roads to "buy" their emeralds for a handful of pesos. Only the very brave, foolish or desperate refuse the offered price, for the enforcers carry machine-guns, and use them without qualms. The same gangs organize the supply of food to clandestine mining zones, cancelling debts in exchange for virtually all the gems a guaquero has found, and only liquidating bad debts by liquidating the debtor.

In the mountainous 500-square-mile area around Muzo an army investigation team discovered that gunmen were running a nearly autonomous state, controlled by two gangs from Bogota and the city of Chiquinquira whose activities the police had been trying to stop for years.

The investigators estimated that 20,000 people were in the area, half with modern firearms and one in five with criminal records. The local police and mining authorities had been bribed and threatened into indifference to the exploitation and brutality.

Fifteen gang leaders were captured in Bogota and will now go before a military court on charges of criminal association, extortion, robbery, possession of firearms, smuggling and multiple murder.

But the impoverished guaqueros, for as long as the emerald fever holds them, will continue to risk any danger in the desperate search for sudden wealth. The poorest sectors of the population have been untouched by the steady progress of Colombian industrial development and despite recent government attempts to control migration from the countryside, tens of thousands of people every year prefer to leave for the slums and shanty-towns of the cities in hope of jobs and money. Without either, the stories of fortunes to be made in the emerald zones can give a man the desperate urge to try his luck.

Example in Economy

In this day of the billion dollar drop in the bucket, it is comforting to find one man in political life who is showing some old fashioned concern for the taxpayers' money.

School board chairman Allan McKinnon's announced intention of introducing "responsibility accounting" — or in simpler terms, living within the budget, to individual schools' operations, is a most commendable step. It is a step which badly needs to be carried all the way to Ottawa.

FED UP WITH WASTE IN GOVERNMENT

Personality Preferred

Recently I watched a telecast which depicted Senator Edward Kennedy introducing George McGovern at a political rally. Sparks were flying. The audience went wild with excitement upon hearing the senator speak. Right after the speech was ended, the presidential candidate mounted the rostrum to make known, in his usual somewhat humdrum fashion, his policies. The effect on the audience was not nearly so moving as when the senator spoke.

Why should Senator Kennedy have moved his listeners so? Was the message he had to deliver entirely responsible for this? I think not. Rather it was the way in which it was delivered. The man is a born orator, able to project his charming personality (charisma) while speaking, and at all other times. McGovern is quite another type.

About the same difference exists between the leaders of two of Canada's political parties as does between those two Americans. Pierre Trudeau, although certainly not endowed with an over abundance of oratorical ability, still retains some of the charisma which was probably largely responsible for having him put into power in the first place. He has personality. Robert Stanfield possesses individuality.

The word personality is derived from the Latin personna, meaning mask. If more people were aware of this fact, and that beneath the mask of personality lies one's true nature (individuality), there would be far less chance of them being deceived by personality.

Robert Stanfield, usually unmasked, is a gentleman. (Or is that considered a dirty word nowadays?) His integrity can be clearly seen. His utterances might lack fire, but their issues make sense. I would far sooner vote for an individualist than for a man or woman bubbling over with personality. Why? Because the former shows his real nature, whereas the latter keeps his concealed.

CONSERVATIVE

Mr. Trudeau's Marxism

On Jan. 13, 1969, Mr. Trudeau spoke to Canadian university students in London, England. He was asked, "What society would you choose to make Canada? Socialist or capitalist?"

This was Mr. Trudeau's answer, "Labor party socialist — or Cuban socialism or Chinese socialism — socialism from each according to his means?"

And then the questioner said, "From each according to his ability, to each according to his need (i.e., the Marxist formula). Would you support that?" The prime minister said, "Yes, in theory, but not entirely in practice. I think in history there have been some small communities which have done that, and I support this and admire it. I do not think it is workable under present circumstances. There is still a lot of hate and violence and injustice and inequity and racial discrimination which we shall have to overcome before ever reaching such a state. But if you ask me if it is an ideal, a beacon, something which the world should have, yes I think it is."

Mr. Diefenbaker brought this conversation to Parliament's attention on March 17, 1970, and it is recorded on Page 5117 of Hansard of that date. Mr. Diefenbaker also informed Parliament that the words "just society" and "participatory democracy" were first used by Mao Tse-tung.

If many Canadians are still unable to see Mr. Trudeau as a dangerous and very devious man who has deceived a large percentage of the electorate as to his real political beliefs; if die-hard Liberals continue to vote Liberal without realizing that the prime minister is a radical socialist; if Socreds siphon off part of the Conservative vote and Mr. Trudeau is returned to power, then Canada may well be on her way to Cuban or Chinese socialism. The sad thing is that many voters will not realize the crucial nature of the forthcoming election. It is critical because on it may hinge the very fate of parliamentary democracy in Canada.

I am frankly apprehensive about the purposes, the real purposes, for which Mr. Trudeau's "special police directorate" will be used once he has entrenched himself in power. Hence the pseudonym.

ONCE BITTEN.

'If I Were Prime Minister . . .'

If I were prime minister of Canada, my program would be to first try to reinstate those principles and values upon which this nation was built — which brought the provinces together some one hundred years ago; which brought us unity, prosperity and international integrity, not to mention one of the highest standards of living in the world.

In re-dedicating the Canadian people to the ideals of freedom and liberty, I hold that citizens might then also appreciate the value of our democratic institutions, respecting the law, other people's rights and the concept of good social order.

If I were prime minister, I would govern by way of encouraging accountability, self-reliance and self respect instead of the slavery of welfare, sloth, greed and handouts. I would promote the right of all men to aspire to the extent of their desire and capabilities, without government hindering their effort. I would place honor above hauteur, discipline over desire, dedication before demonstration and right before "rights."

My Canada would be green with hope rather than green with envy, imbued with pride of purpose rather than pride of permissiveness. I would call for the unity of the nation under God, recognizing in all humility that but for the grace of God, there would be no Canada, no unity and no democratic election for any prime minister or House of Commons.

On a chilly September evening, huddled by a campfire where the Firehold and Gibbons Rivers flow together, a small band of men talked about the marvels they had been exploring: high mountain habitats, rivers cascading hundreds of feet into ochre-walled canyons, multihued pools and cauldrons, chemicals bubbling up from the earth.

They had even seen a giant geyser spout 100-foot-high fountains of steaming water at almost hourly intervals; they were later to name it "Old Faithful."

The explorers, mostly prominent Montana men led by Henry Washburn, surveyor-general of Montana Territory, had come on a month-long trip to confirm and chart phenomena described by earlier adventurers.

The diary of one of those men records that around the campfire Cornelius Hedges, a lawyer and writer, suggested public rather than private ownership of the surrounding public lands.

The men agreed to work toward having the area set aside as a national park. Although historians lack other details about this campfire conversation of Sept. 19, 1890, it helped crystallize the idea.

Quickly it gained momentum. In March, 1872, President Grant signed into law an act of congress withdrawing federal lands near the headquarters of the Yellowstone River from settlement, occupancy, or sale.

The area was dedicated "as a public park or pleasuring ground for the benefit and enjoyment of the people."

Creation of National Parks Viewed As Important as Economic Growth

First of a series

By ROBERT CAHN

Around the world, from Yellowstone, Wyoming, to the island nation of Tonga in the Pacific, governments are setting aside national parks for their people to enjoy: 1,422 parks or "equivalent reserves" in 101 nations at last count. The nature, and the implications, of this dramatic growth are outlined here by the environment editor of The Christian Science Monitor.

On a chilly September evening, huddled by a campfire where the Firehold and Gibbons Rivers flow together, a small band of men talked about the marvels they had been exploring: high mountain habitats, rivers cascading hundreds of feet into ochre-walled canyons, multihued pools and cauldrons, chemicals bubbling up from the earth.

Skip a century and leap an ocean. The place is the kingdom of Tonga in the South Pacific. The date May 13, 1972.

King Taufa'ahau Toupou IV looked down on a big crowd and dedicated four areas in his kingdom as national parks where people could "go and relax and enjoy."

Thus Tonga became the newest of the more than 100 nations which have established over 1,420 national parks or equivalent reserves in the Yellowstone tradition.

On Sept. 19 hundreds of delegates from more than 80 countries gathered at Yellowstone National Park, Wyo. for the second world conference on national parks sponsored jointly by the U.S. National Park Service, the International Union for Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources (IUCN), and the U.S. National Parks Centennial Commission.

From Australia to Zaire, from Canada, Switzerland, Chad, Chile, Trinidad, Nepal, Iran, from the Soviet Union and Togo, they were to be together for eight days.

And so the phenomeon of national parks has become a vital concern not only in highly industrialized nations but in developing countries as well.

Many large and powerful nations that have thought only in terms of economic development over the past century or two have come to realize in recent years that part of their well-being is to protect the few remaining natural treasures which can help give their people respite and peace.

For the developing nations, the need to set aside natural areas poses a conflict of priorities when they debate opening up large land areas for national parks while facing urgent pressures for more farmland, housing, and jobs.

Yet these political leaders with vision, and a growing number of ordinary citizens in these countries are looking beyond the immediate demand for economic gain. They see a time when their people might need the solace of natural areas but find none.

And some countries, such as Kenya, where tourism is the second-biggest industry, are realizing that with proper planning, conflicting priorities could well be reconciled.

Opening sessions of the conference were linked to the rededication of Yellowstone and its ideals for another 100 years.

Then the scene shifted to nearby Grand Teton National Park for six days of technical sessions on such topics as wildlife management, environmental education, marine parks, population and economic pressures, and the universal conflicts of parks and people.

In ancient China and India certain lands were protected for wildlife; in many countries royalty reserved lands for hunting. Occasionally the royal preserves were opened to the public. Many cities throughout the world developed landscaped town squares or large urban parks.

But the idea that took hold with Yellowstone was that certain large areas should be permanently set aside and supported by national governments. Such uses as lumbering, farming, mining, and grazing, as well as human settlements, would be banned.

The national park idea was by no means universally popular or speedily adopted. The Yellowstone bill would undoubtedly have been defeated or delayed had stockmen coveted Yellowstone's meadows. But the region was too remote for logging and mining, and the presence of hostile Indians in rugged country caused westward settlers to pass it by.

But gradually the park concept caught on with the American public; Yosemite, Sequoia, and General Grant (later renamed Kings Canyon) in California; Mt. Rainier in Washington; Crater Lake in Oregon; Mesa Verde in Colorado; and Glacier in Montana were set aside as national parks early in the 20th century.

Meanwhile, the roots were taking hold elsewhere. The first time the words "national park" were used in the body of legislation was when Australia established what is now Royal National Park near Sydney in 1879.

Canada created its first, Banff National Park in Alberta in 1887, and established a National Park Service in 1911, five years ahead of a similar U.S. action.

In South America in 1903, Dr. Francisco P. Moreno, after being given 18,000 acres by the Argentine government as a reward for exploration, gave the land back to the government for a national park, Nahuel Huapi, which is now the largest and most popular in Argentina.

Even before that, the first private donation specifically for national park use was made in 1877 when an association of Maori chiefs in New Zealand gave the government land which became the basis of Tongariro National Park.

And in Africa, one of the world's first large-scale efforts to have a national park with major emphasis on scientific research was made in 1925 with the establishment of Albert National Park in the then Belgian Congo (now Zaire).

The past 10 years have seen the greatest growth and the greatest difficulties for national parks.

In most of the industrial world, especially in the United States and Japan, the tide of visitors has surprised officials. In many cases the parks have not been able to absorb it without damage.

The United States, after creating few national parks in the two decades prior to 1962, set aside five major new parks—Guadalupe Mountains in Texas, Canyonlands in Utah, North Cascades in Washington, Voyageurs in Minnesota, and Redwood Park in California.

Not to be outdone, Canada has added 11 new national parks in the last four years (including Pacific Rim on Vancouver Island's west coast), increasing the total area in its system by more than 50 per cent. Four new parks were added this year, three of them in the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

Among developing nations many new parks have been established in the decade, but support from citizens and politicians has often been slow.

Botswana has set aside 17 per cent of the entire nation in national parks and equivalent reserves. Senegal and Cameroon each have three national parks established since independence.

Zaire has four new national parks covering 10 million acres, and Zambia is soon expected to set aside 10 or more new national parks. Latin American countries have established about 30 new parks since 1962.

Most of Europe, on the other hand, has such high population density and so much of the wild has already been civilized that new park landscapes meeting UN criteria are virtually impossible to find.

Other new developments are underway in the park field. Many countries are rushing to establish or plan marine parks.

A World Heritage Trust convention to give recognition and collective assistance where needed to areas of international significance has been proposed by President Nixon, recommended by the recent United Nations Conference on the Human Environment, and will be voted on at the October general conference of UNESCO.

Such a convention would probably include areas such as the Grand Canyon, the Serengeti plains in Tanzania, the Galapagos Islands in Ecuador, and Iguazu Falls in Argentine — all now established as national parks.

In some countries, reversals have been felt, with parks losing out to settlements, agriculture, highways, dams, or other exploitive intrusions damaging to a section or sometimes to the entire park.

Some allow hunting, logging, and even resort communities within their borders. Some are established and run by states rather than a national government.

The question: Whether the parks should be raised to meet the criteria, or the criteria lowered to meet existing conditions.

Dr. Kai Curry-Lindahl, who directs UNESCO ecology and conservation activities for Africa, states that new dimensions must be added to the reasons why national parks must be established.

National parks are needed for mental and physical health and well-being "as a counterbalance to urban life and social stress," he points out.

Parks are also needed as living laboratories for biological studies, as gene banks for wild plants and animals, for rehabilitation of destroyed areas, and also for educational and historic purposes.

"It is indeed difficult to understand why it should be more important for humanity to preserve at immense costs dead monuments of the past than living treasures of bygone days — plants, animals and intact biocommunities," says Curry-Lindahl.

"It is often claimed that historic cultural sites are more valuable to preserve than natural regions because the former reflect how man lived in the past.

"But living biocommunities (even if they are in perpetual evolution) were the homes of our ancestors for more than two million years before any building existed."

must be in favor of a growth policy because that means more jobs. When they see this unemployment coming up they will realize they voted wrongly in the election and they will be the first group to vote against socialist government in B.C."

Conservative house leader Dr. Scott Wallace said he found two "glaring ommissions" in the throne speech. It contained no help for the 5,000 elderly persons in nursing homes and private hospitals and made no mention of the need to create new jobs.

Liberal leader David Anderson said the throne speech was "more or less as expected" and added he would withhold further comment until there had been an opportunity to study the proposed legislation to be dealt with at this session.

He cautioned, however, that even the staged increase in the provincial minimum wage from $1.50 to $2.50 over 18 months could boost unemployment figures which already stand at about 8 per cent in this province.

Earlier, Premier Barrett denied suggestions that the NDP was trying to outdo the generosity of the new federal unemployment insurance scheme in establishing a $200 minimum monthly income for everyone over 65 in B.C. He said: "We are dealing with people who have been productive, who have built this country and for too long have been cast aside."

Under the Canada Assistance Plan, by which Ottawa pays 50 per cent of approved costs, there will have to be a needs test to qualify, Barrett said. But he added even if federal authorities refuse to pay half of the full cost of the scheme — which according to latest estimates will be $45 million to $60 million — B.C. will implement it.

"We are not acting irresponsibly," Barrrett said. "This province is wealthy enough to do it. We can do it and we intend to do it."

The premier added, however, "I would expect the federal government to act responsibly in this regard (by agreeing to full sharing under the CAP) before Oct. 30."

The throne speech said: "This special session will see the first guaranteed minimum income of $200 per month for senior citizens established anywhere in North America. It is this government's sincere attempt to pioneer legislation for the senior citizens of this province. Without their energy, dedication and commitment to the province in its early days, none of us would be in a position to enjoy our great province as much as we do today.

"This program will cost a substantial amount of money, but this wealthy province has the funds available, and it is a matter of some urgency that these funds be put into the hands of our senior citizens as a right as quickly as possible."

Bennett told reporters later the measures set out in his Kelowna Charter, including a guaranteed income of $225 a month for the aged, handicapped and mothers with young children and establishment of a $50 million industrial development corporation, will be introduced in the form of private members bills at this session.

"There is no excuse for the NDP socialist government not being generous now with the aged and so forth," Bennett said, "because I left them hundreds of millions of dollars to pay out. (They) recognize it in the throne speech but not enough money is being spent there at this time."

The opposition leader said it wouldn't be inflationary to give more money to the aged and needy although he termed some of the NDP policies including the new minimum wage proposal inflationary.

Barrett said the effects of the staged increases — in three jumps, from $1.50 to $2 now, to $2.25 by Dec. 31, 1973, and to $2.50 by June, 1974 — won't be unduly hard on anyone because employers "have lots of time to plan." In fact, he said, it will help small businessmen because "employees will come to their jobs with a renewed sense of purpose."

He added the present system of exemptions which include agricultural and domestic workers will be reviewed in the meantime.

The rest of the proposed legislative program — with a single exception — had been foreshadowed in earlier statements by government spokesmen.

The mediation commission will be abolished and its three commissioners headed by former Yukon Judge John Parker, whose salaries total $122,500 annually, dismissed.

A 6.5 per cent ceiling on teachers salary increases will be eliminated and budget restrictions on school boards eased. A proposed change in the Municipal Act will restore the required two thirds majorities on council favoring zoning changes which was abolished under Social Credit last spring. This move is designed primarily to curb speculation in agricultural lands.

As promised, the NDP government will also repeal legislation banning advertising of liquor and tobacco products. But in a surprise move it has introduced a new bill entitled Tobacco Products Act which would give the government the power to control packaging, labelling, selling, distribution, advertising and promotion of tobacco and tobacco products within B.C.

Finally, a bill appointing the new speaker Gordon Dowding as a special commissioner to inquire into all practices and procedures of the legislative assembly and its committees was introduced.

Soviets Set Amnesty For Jubilee

MOSCOW (UPI) A general amnesty freeing thousands of imprisoned criminals will be declared shortly in connection with the 50th anniversary of the establishment of the Soviet Union.

Such amnesties are customarily declared to mark key events in the Soviet Union such as the half century jubilee which will be celebrated Dec. 30.

Peronists Blamed In Blasts

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Terrorists blasted all rail lines around the City of Rosario and set off more bombs in Buenos Aires Tuesday, the 27th anniversary of exiled President Juan Peron's seizure of power in Argentina.

Police attributed the bombings to extremist followers of Peron and banned "loyalty day" demonstrations Peronists had scheduled in Buenos Aires to mark the anniversary.

A series of bombs exploded simultaneously before dawn in railroad yards on the outskirts of Rosario, effectively cutting all railroad traffic to the port city on the Parana River about 150 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

Two more bombs exploded in this capital, following the blast Monday at the Sheraton Hotel in which a Canadian woman was killed and two others were injured.

Allende Seeks Referee

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — Riot police clashed with battling, rival political organizations in downtown Santiago Tuesday as Marxist President Salvador Allende sought mediaion to settle an escalating series of strikes that has crippled Chile's economy.

Political groups opposed to and supporting Allende's government clashed for the second consecutive day in the capital. Police fired tear gas grenades into the roving bands, and used a truck-mounted water cannon to disperse them.

A police official said "many people" were arrested in the incidents. There was no immediate report of injuries.

As the scope of the strikes broadened, Allende asked Miguel Jacob, president of the Chilean Association of Professional Organizations, to draw up a plan to mediate the walkouts. The association includes the 19 major professional organizations in the nation.

Travelling Henry Stirs Up Market

NEW YORK (AP) — With an assist from presidential adviser Henry Kissinger, the stock market pulled itself out of a four-day slide Tuesday.

Many analysts had said Kissinger's trips in search of a Vietnam peace settlement no longer could stir the market. But when the White House announced Tuesday that Kissinger would visit Saigon to confer with President Nguyen Van Thieu, the market gave a moderate but perceptible spurt.

Phone Rises

TORONTO (CP) — Prices on the Toronto stock market closed moderately higher in active trading, ending a two-day, record-breaking decline.

B.C. Telephone was up ¾ to $56, Inland Gas ¼ to $11⅞, Westcoast Transmission ¼ to $22¾, MacMillan Bloedel ½ to $24 and Cominco ⅛ to $26¾. All are B.C.-based issues which suffered heavily following announcement recently of provincial government plans to acquire B.C. Telephone and perhaps other companies.

North Canadian Oils Ltd. announced Tuesday that it has discovered oil in southwestern Saskatchewan. The stock closed at $6.35, up 95 cents.

Light Day

MONTREAL (CP) — Most sectors advanced in light trading. On the Montreal Stock Exchange, Falconbridge Nickel gained 3 to $56 and British Columbia Telephone 1 to $56 while Dominion Petroleum fell 1¼ to $41¼ and B.C. Forest Products 1¼ to $20.

Prices Up

VANCOUVER — Prices were up in light trading. Among industrials, Thermoplex was trading unchanged at $2. Tokar was up 20 cents at $2.45. In the mines, Gunn rose 5 cents to .89. Adonis rose 6 cents to .71.

Hydro Cancels Farm Crossing

DAWSON CREEK, B.C. (CP) — B.C. Hydro cancelled a contract to build a power transmission line across farmland after farmers in the area rejected the utility's last land expropriation offer. Len Butler, Peace River country organizer for the National Farmers' Union and spokesman for the farmers in the protest, said he had "mixed feelings" about Hydro's decision.

The construction industry in Canada is perking along quite nicely, in the opinion of Canadian Construction Association president Eric Hartley of Toronto.

To keep it perking along, however, shapes up as a major concern in the eyes of the association. The cyclical nature of the industry, labor difficulties and changing governments and their policies were dwelt on during an interview here Tuesday.

Hartley spoke to members of the Construction Association of B.C. Tuesday as part of a B.C.-wide visit. He was in

Room To Perk In Construction

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

The construction industry in Canada is perking along quite nicely, in the opinion of Canadian Construction Association president Eric Hartley of Toronto.

To keep it perking along, however, shapes up as a major concern in the eyes of the association. The cyclical nature of the industry, labor difficulties and changing governments and their policies were dwelt on during an interview here Tuesday.

Hartley spoke to members of the Construction Association of B.C. Tuesday as part of a B.C.-wide visit. He was in Prince George Monday and will attend the annual meeting of the Amalgamated Construction Association of B.C. at Harrison later this week.

Hartley said the best way to ensure that the economy will stay lively is to keep the investment climate attractive, particularly with regard to construction. He said it was important to remember that 16 per cent of the gross national product stemmed from this industry and many thousands of jobs were dependent upon it.

Hartley, therefore, said that he had reservations about governmental takeovers in any industry, particularly right now in B.C.

And while most sections of the country are showing improvement in dollar volume of construction activity, Hartley said he was concerned in that B.C., as early as last May, was showing a slight decline.

"We are growing at about 7 per cent per year right now in Canada," said the construction president, "but there is much more room for growth."

Asked whether the Mackenzie Valley pipeline project was essential to the well-being of the industry, Hartley said it wasn't. However, he said, what was important was that a decision be made soon.

"Something of this nature is a tremendous undertaking and a starting date is necessary before builders can make their plans for the future. The lead time required in equipment requirements alone is just one important factor," he said.

Hartley said he also didn't feel it essential that the pipeline financing necessarily be Canadian.

"Our country is built on foreign capital. And much of our work force comes from foreign shores and is furthermore encouraged to come," he said.

"But once that pipeline is started, we certainly wouldn't like to see it stopped, for any reason," he added.

The construction president saw hope in the matter of labor relations in the industry.

"The old methods of confrontation must go," he said. "Both sides have to look at new methods."

Hartley said experiments in labor relations had already begun in Ontario. He has been appointed a member of a nine-member construction industry review panel.

Members of the panel, when they are all named, will include four from management, four from unions and a former deputy minister of labor for the province of Ontario. Their purpose will be to settle problem areas that can't be resolved at the bargaining table.

Effects of weather and government practice of not asking for tenders until provincial budgets have been passed are two factors that lead to the cyclical nature of the construction iindustry.

"They've started a system of pre-tendering in Manitoba that is working very well," said Hartley. He explained that all the tenders now are ready, especially with regard to such things as highway construction, before the budget comes to a vote, and then it's a quick matter to begin the project. This type of thinking allows construction planners much wider leeway in their planning, he said.

Hartley is a civil engineer and is chairman and chief executive officer of Frankel Structural Steel Ltd. in Toronto.

He is the son-in-law of the late Tillie Rolston, a former Conservative and Social Credit MLA. And a nephew, Peter Rolston, took his seat as an NDP backbencher in the B.C. House Tuesday.

Parker, a Supreme Court judge from the Yukon; Baskin, a leading B.C. labor official, and Pollock, who was B.C. general manager for the CNR, were appointed for seven year terms in 1968.

Under terms of the contract, Parker was to receive $42,500 a year until 1975, Baskin and Pollock $40,000 each.

Baskin says the wiping out of the three jobs will be against the terms of this contract. But government sources say any contract there was dies with the legislation that is wiped out.

While changes proposed for the Mediation Act don't sit well with the commissioners and some others, they were hailed with delight by labor.

Labor officials also praised the Barrett government for its intention during this session to put the male and female minimum wages acts in one and increase the minimum wage from $1.50 an hour to $2.50 in three stages by June of 1974.

If they were unhappy about any aspect of this planned legislation, it is the decision to retain the areas of exemption, particularly for agricultural workers.

The Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce warns that the bigger minimum wage will add to inflation and unemployment. It also expresses disappointment about changes to the Mediation Act.

Baskin, referring to the seven-year Mediation Act contract, said: "I hadn't anticipated this government would evade the tenure granted us by the previous government. I expected they would continue to abide by the contract given by their predecessors.

No one had consulted him and the news of what was to happen "came to me as a cruel surprise while I was watching a TV interview," he said.

"To watch this sort of thing on a TV interview after not being shown the courtesy of prior discussion is, I repeat, an extremely cruel way to learn what is in store for you."

Baskin, who was supervisor in B.C. for the United Steelworkers of America and a vice-president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, said he would like to remind the new government of its own laws — that when one employer takes over a contract from another, it must live up to the terms of that agreement with its employees.

"The way it came out seemed as if it was some kind of attack on us. We're just three government employees — that's all.

When asked about his $40,000 annual salary, Baskin was quick to say this was the "gross" amount. He said there are no expense allowances and no pensions.

Parker said it should have been clear that the NDP would get rid of the commission.

"It is the duty of a government to govern as its conscience tells it to govern," he said.

But he said he felt that Barrett demonstrated by his attitude that he hadn't been "thoroughly informed" about the commissioners and their job.

"We're not political appointments," he said. "None of us, in fact, had ever been a Social Creditor. I think we've done a very competent job."

Asked about the contract, he said: "I think we'll be compensated in some way. It is inconceivable that the government could act otherwise."

Praise for the two pieces of proposed legislation came from Ray Haynes, secretary of the 151,000-member B.C. Federation of Labor, and John Schibli, vice-president of the Victoria Labor Council.

"It goes without saying that we're very pleased about both moves," said Haynes.

"I think we would have liked to see the increase in the minimum wage covered in one move, but we can understand the reasoning behind the three stages" — $2 immediately, $2.25 in December, 1973, and $2.50 in June, 1974.

Schibli said he felt industries such as the service industry might have a hard time coping with the $1 an hour boost on an immediate basis, but could now plan to meet it successfully in stages.

Haynes said labor was "a bit concerned" that agricultural workers were still outside the minimum wage low. He felt this should still be dealt with at this session of the legislature or "as soon as possible."

Barrett said in an interview that information concerning workers still exempt would have to be studied before any change could be made.

"The thing that concerns me is that it appears to be awfully inflationary. This is going to be a sixty-six and two-thirds per cent increase, and even spread over 18 months this is too much."

He fears it will frighten some employers to the point where there will be a reduction in jobs. This, in turn, he said, would mean an upswing in unemployment and welfare costs — "something we don't need more of."

Student Makes List

Senior Advisers

SASKATOON (CP) — A directory of retired people willing to provide consultant services, prepare briefs and submissions and participate in fund-raising activities, has been compiled by a University of Saskatchewan student.

Bill Kraus spent the summer talking to more than 80 local people and then prepared an initial listing of 36 retired persons who want to contribute their knowledge to the community.

The project was funded by a $1,000 private donor scholarship in co-operation with the commerce college and education department of the university.

Environment Scholarship

VANCOUVER (CP) — An annual scholarship to support environmental research related mining has been established with $11,000 from the Kitsault Community Club, which wound up its affairs earlier this year when B.C. Molybdenum Ltd. shut down its mine on Alice Arm. It will provide $1,000 each year to a UBC graduate student in mining or metallurgy programs doing research in environmental control or land reclamation.

Mission Mayor Announces Pact

MISSION (CP) — Mayor Neville Cox announced Monday a three-year contract with the municipality's 20 civic employees, giving laborers a 35-cents-an hour increase in each year. He said the new settlement will mean either increased taxes or reduced services.

CAPITAL GAINS TAX

What to do about it, now that it's here

Montreal Trust introduces new Investment Accounting and Safe Custody Services that can save you a lot of problems. And maybe some money.

If you own stocks or bonds, you will now be required to maintain an accurate, up-to-date set of records for Capital Gains Tax purposes and investment accounting will be needed for the proper day-to-day management of investment portfolios. This means that every time you trade a stock you will have to be aware of the tax consequences of your action. This detailed accounting will, for many people, prove to be complex and extremely time-consuming but complete records will be required when the time comes to file your tax return.

We are therefore introducing a special service for our clients, whereby all necessary documents and information are supplied by us once a quarter, or more often if required, in a concise, easy-to-read format. This will mean you are in the position to review your investment portfolio with the latest, most accurate information at your fingertips, and as a consequence, avoid paying more tax than is absolutely necessary.

If you would like more information on this new service, simply call Frank Portlock in Victoria at 386-2111.

Torrential Rain Delays Third Game of Series

OAKLAND — It doesn't usually rain much in Oakland in October.

But this year has been an exception and Tuesday was no exception to the exception.

A torrential rain and hail storm forced postponement of the third game of the best-of-seven baseball world series between Cincinnati Reds and Oakland Athletics — striking just minutes before the scheduled start.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn announced the postponement 26 minutes after the scheduled start of the game and 43 minutes after the storm began, leaving the already-soaked Oakland Coliseum field in unplayable condition.

Record rain that has soaked Northern California for 10 consecutive days left the outfield soft and soggy before Tuesday night's storm. A helicopter hovered over the outfield most of Tuesday, trying to dry the soaked field.

The rainout pushed the entire series schedule back one day and eliminated the open travel day. The third game will be played today and the fourth game Thursday, both in Oakland and starting at 5:30 p.m. PDT.

Friday, originally a travel date, will be used for game No. 5 in Oakland, if needed. That game would be played at 1 p.m. PDT. Should the series need to return to Cincinnati for the sixth and seventh games, they would be played as scheduled at 10 a.m. PDT, Saturday and Sunday.

Today's game will be telecast on Channels 2, 5 and 6 and broadcast on radio stations CJVI (900) and CBU (690) starting at 5 p.m.

Last year's series had a rainout when the second game in Baltimore was postponed. The most rain-lagued series took place 10 years ago when San Francisco Giants and New York Yankees had to wait out three days of rain in California to play their sixth game. That series lasted 13 days — longest in history.

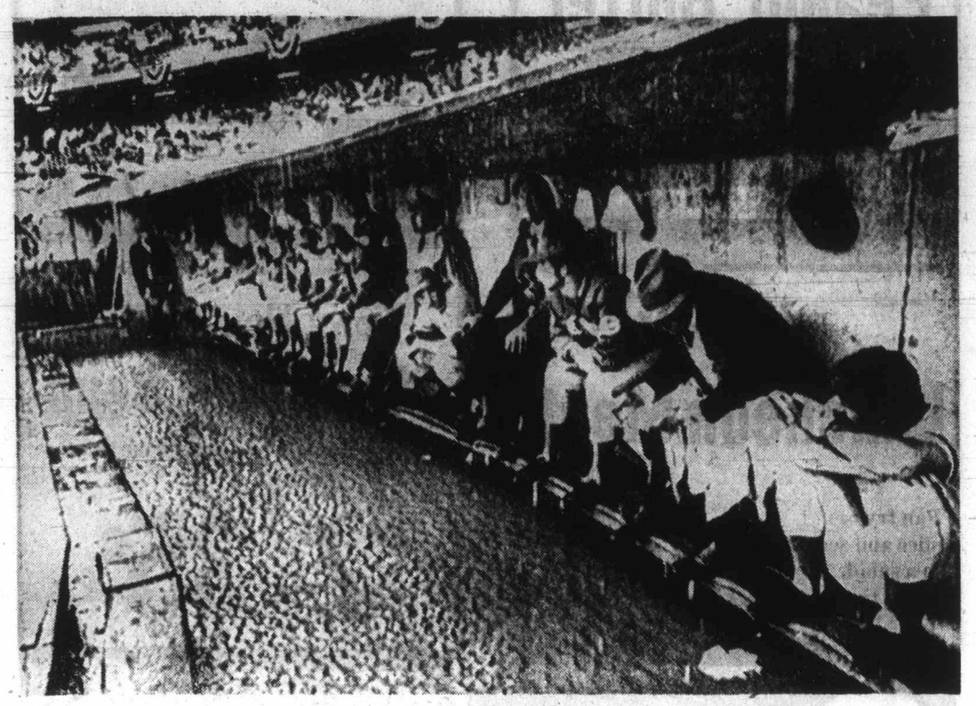
Both of Oakland's American League playoff games against Detroit Tigers this year were played under leaden skies and the lights were on for both days, although rain did not interrupt play.

Heavy rain fell Monday night over the area but Tuesday was clear-up until game time. Then the storm hit with such suddenness that the formally dressed orchestra assembled in centre field for pre-game entertainment was caught right in the middle of it. Thunder roared in the background and soon the hailstones hit.

About 40 minutes after the rain began, Kuhn emerged from the Oakland dugout and toured the outfield with two of the umpires.

When the public address announcement told the crowd the game had been postponed, their was loud booing from the sellout crowd of 50,000 fans.

Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson, faced with the necessity of rallying his club from a 2-0 deficit in games, announced that he will stick with Jack Billingham as his third-game pitcher. Dick Williams, manager of the Athletics, said that he will use John "Blue Moon" Odom, as planned.



ANKLE-DEEP WATER in parts of the Cincinnati dugout forced players up onto benches at Oakland Tuesday as they awaited a decision on the third game of the world series. A 'freak' rain and hail squall postponed the game until today. Oakland leads the series, 2-0. —AP

Flashy Pair of Tigers Too Much for Cougars

By STAN COOPER

Lanny McDonald and Tom Lysiak. Remember those names.

That combination is going to be prominent in the Western Canada Hockey League this season. And probably in the amateur draft of the National Hockey League next June.

The pair combined to lead Medicine Hat Tigers to a 6-4 decision over Victoria Cougars, Tuesday night, before a disappointing crowd of 1372 at Memorial Arena.

The flashy 19-year-olds, in their last season of junior action, figured in four of the six goals and must have logged about 40 minutes of ice time each.

Besides helping teammates put the puck in the net, they worked tirelessly killing penalties and preventing the ever-trying Cougars from equalizing late in the game.

Right-winger McDonald was at his best in the second period when the Tigers, first in the Western Division, held a wide edge in play. The Alberta club outscored Victoria 3-0 and held an amazing 24-4 edge in shots on goal.

McDonald broke a 1-1 first-period tie seconds after Cougars had successfully killed off a penalty. Then the lanky winger set up Barry Dean for his second goal, six minutes later, and had a hand in Randy Aimoe's goal at the 18:21 mark.

Lysiak, who won the scoring title last season with 143 points, was held to a goal and assist but his scoring shot, with 11 seconds remaining in the game, killed a Cougar rally.

With Victoria goalkeeper Sam Clegg pulled in favor of a sixth attacker, Cougars were forcing the play when McDonald shot the puck down the right side and chased it behind the empty net.

He slipped a pass to Lysiak at the boards and the big centre wheeled and made no mistake.

Cougars had pulled to within a goal seconds earlier when Dave Faulkner scored his second goal of the period, on a power-play. Dale Cook, with his fourth goal in three games, and Terry Ewasiuk were the other Victoria marksmen.

Paul Granchukoff, on a hotly-disputed play, scored what proved to be the winner early in the third period. Cougars claimed Clegg had control of the puck in the crease and that referee Don Bold was slow in whistling the play down.

Clegg had replaced Blaine Ferguson for the third period and he made nine stops.

Ferguson kept Cougars in the game for the first 40 minutes, with dazzling saves. He finished with 32 stops, including 21 in the second period.

And that leaves Cougar coach Mitch Pechet still wondering about a starting goalkeeper.

Both Clegg and Ferguson are 19 years old and Pechet has stated on several occasions that he would prefer to have one 19-year-old to go along with promising rookie, Danny Rogers who is only 15.

Pechet may have a chance to test all his netminders in the upcoming week as Cougars play Vancouver Nats four times in eight days.

Nats make their first appearance of the schedule here on Saturday night for an 8:30 game. Cougars play in Vancouver on Sunday and a week Friday before returning to Memorial Arena, Oct. 28.

Goaltending Great of Leafs Dies After Heart Seizure

TORONTO (CP) — Turk Broda, called by many the finest goaltender in the National Hockey League when playoffs were on the line, died Tuesday night in hospital after a massive heart seizure. He was 58.

Broda had suffered some chest pains Monday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Barbara Tushingham, but did not enter hospital until Tuesday where he suffered a major seizure.

Conn Smyth, owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs, saw Broda perform for Detroit Olympias against a Windsor team that year and, since he was looking for a replacement for Hall of Famer George Hainsworth, he purchased the youngster's contract.

The ruddy-faced Broda, who picked up the nickname because of the freckles on his face—an abbreviation of "Turkey Face"—stayed with Toronto 16 years with two seasons out for military duty during the Second World War. He retired in 1952.

He twice won the Vezina Trophy as the NHL's top goaltender and was often referred to as the greatest pressure player of all time. He played in 101 Stanley Cup games and allowed only 211 goals—a 2.08 goals-against average—both playoff records.

Broda

In the 1949 championship finals, he gave up only four goals as the Maple Leafs swept Detroit in four games. Again in 1951, his brilliance carried Toronto to another title as he allowed only nine goals in eight playoff games.

Broda started out in public school to be a defenceman, but after the first tryout his school principal said the defence was set "but we need a goaltender, Walter."

Broda was a goaltender from that day.

When his playing days ended he began a coaching career by taking Weston, Ont., Dukes to the Ontario Junior B championship. He later coached Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series for 10 years, winning the national Memorial Cup championship twice.

He later coached Newmarket Junior B Huskies, Charlotte, N.C., of the Eastern League, Moncton of the Maritime Junior Hockey League, Quebec Aces of the American League and London Nationals of the OHA Junior A.

In recent years he had been associated with a Toronto construction firm.

He was elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1967.

Oilers, Crusaders Win in Overtime

Teams of the World Hockey Association continued to show equality Tuesday night with two of three games being decided in overtime.

At Edmonton, Ron Walters gave the Oilers a 3-2 win over Winnipeg Jets, scoring after 4:53 minutes of overtime before 3285 fans.

Former Toronto Maple Leaf Jim Harrison had twice given Oilers the lead but Bob Ash, in the first period, and Norm Beaudin, with less than four minustes remaining in regulation time, fired equalizers.

Unbeaten Cleveland Crusaders ran their win streak to four games and took the lead in the eastern division with a 4-3 overtime win over New York Raiders.

A crowd of 2389 in Cleveland saw Skip Crake fire the winner at 6:00 of the sudden-death extra time to spoil a rally by the Raiders from a 0-3 deficit.

Rich Pumple, Bob Dillabough and Ron Buchanan had given Crusaders the lead by 13:13 of the second period but Brian Morenz, Mike Laughton and Alton White scored for Raiders to force overtime.

Broncos On Top

SASKATOON (CP) — Two goals late in the third period gave Swift Current Broncos a 5-3 victory over Saskatoon Blades in a Western Canada Hockey League game Tuesday before 1,831 fans.

Dave Williams led Swift Current into first place in the league's Eastern Division with eight points, one ahead of Brandon Wheat Kings. It was the first loss of the season for Saskatoon, following two wins and a tie in the regular season and six straight exhibition wins.

Canucks Surprise Hawks, Pass Bruins, Rangers

Vancouver Canucks took a mighty leap Tuesday in the East Division standings of the National Hockey League.

Canucks vaulted into fourth place past Boston Bruins, the Stanley Cup champions, and New York Rangers, the team the Bruins beat in the final, by surprising Chicago Black Hawks, 6-3, at Pacific Coliseum.

Canucks, who have won both their home starts this season, got goals from six players to down the leaders of the West Division. Pittsburgh Penguins took advantage of the Black Hawks' misfortune, blanking New York Islanders, 5-0, to get a share of the lead with Chicago.

Coach Vic Stasiuk had the Canucks utilizing a strong checking game and the forwards put on a relentless attack. Bobby Schmautz and captain Orland Kurtenbach scored around a goal by Jim Pappin to give Vancouver a 2-1 lead in the opening period.

Defenceman Jocelyn Guevremont scored on the power play at 7:03 of the second period and Dale Tallon got another for Canucks 76 seconds later before the Black Hawks surged back on goals by Pit Martin and Dennis Hull.

But goalkeeper Dune Wilson was extremely sharp in the final period, stopping 13 shots

Tonight's game between Pittsburgh and Toronto will be telecast on Channel 8 starting at 5 p.m.

Mikita Leads Early Scoring

MONTREAL (CP) — Stan Mikita has taken a bead on his fifth National Hockey League scoring championship.

The Chicago Black Hawks centre, going into Tuesday night action at Vancouver, had figured in nine of Chicago's 17 goals, scoring two and setting up seven, despite the fact that he missed one of Hawks' first five games.

It is his fastest start since 1966-67 when he had 11 points in his first four games.

That was one of the seasons Mikita won the Art Ross Trophy. He was also the winner in 1963-64, 1964-65 and 1967-68.

Gordie Howe, the retired right-wing great with Detroit Red Wings for 25 years and now a vice-president with that club, won the scoring championship six times, no other player has topped the scoring more than three times.

In the four seasons since Mikita's last title, centre Phil Esposito and defenceman Bobby Orr, both of Boston Bruins, have held a monopoly on the scoring title.

Included in Mikita's nine points are seven assists, second-highest total so far. Veteran left-winger John Bucyk of Boston leads in assists with eight, but is still looking for his first goal of the young season.

Grouped with Bucyk at eight points are Bob Berry of Los Angeles Kings, centre Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres and Fred Stanfield, a centre, from Boston. Berry has five goals and three assists and his goal output is matched only by Cliff Koroll of Chicago. Koroll has one assist to go with his five goals.

Sophomore goalkeeper Ken Dryden of Montreal Canadiens is off to a fast start. He has recorded two shutouts and allowed only three goals in the four games the Canadiens have played so far.

All Blacks Have Point To Prove

AUCKLAND (CP) — New Zealand's national rugby team, the All Blacks, may be trying to prove a point in Vancouver Thursday in a match against the British Columbia representative side.

The burly and boisterous All Blacks will be hoping to demonstrate they rate with their country's greats when they start at Vancouver's Brockton Oval on a major international tour that also includes games in the U.S., England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales and France.

Rugby is more than the national sport, it is almost a religion in New Zealand and the All Blacks are by far the country's most popular sports team.

The team chosen for the tour has been criticized by some as one of the weakest All Boack teams ever sent overseas. Yet oddly enough, just the same thing was said about two of the most famous All Black teams in history — the "incomparables" of 1905 and the "invincibles" of 1924..

So rugby enthusiasts will be eagerly watching the opening games of the tour to judge whether history will repeat itself and a comparatively untried side will develop into a formidable combination with experience.

It is widely believed that the forwards have far more quality than the backs.

Led by captain Ian Kirkpatrick, the forwards include men of giant proportions — up to six feet six inches in height and weighing more than 240 pounds.

But it is a different matter in the backs. The selectors had a hard job trying to build an almost new backline. The vice-captain of the team, scrum half Sid Going, is certainly an exception. Many rugby followers rate him as the world's best at his position.

Premier League, Clubs Fined Officials Draw Suspensions

Hughes

Adams

. . . Regal coach and president

The future of the Premier Soccer League has been jeopardized by a Monday ruling of the British Columba Soccer Commission.

In the latest development of a season-long problem, the six-team league and its officials have drawn fines and lengthy suspensions for allowing member teams to compete while under suspension.

The semi-professional league was fined $1,000, individual teams were assessed $300 and the PSL executive was ordered suspended for five years.

Team managers, coaches an officers were suspended for three years.

The penalties, announced Tuesday, were ordered after a marathon meeting of the commission in Vancouver on Monday night.

The league, which is composed of five Lower Mainland teams and Victoria Regals, and the commission have been squabbling for months over registration of players and payment of transfer fees to amateur clubs.

The commission claims the PSL has been using players from other leagues without paying the required $100 transfer fee for each player.

The PSL has been seeking a reduction in transfer fees for players used iin the summer-soccer league.

Individual players are also affected by the rulings.

Committee chairman Stuart Ross of Vancouver said players and trainers are still under suspension and those who continue playing will be suspended for a minimum of one year.

Referees and linesmen who participated in games since Oct. 6 are suspended for two years.

The drastic measures were taken after the national executive committee of the Canadian Soccer Association rejected the PSL's request to retain legal counsel.

The committee met with representatives of both the Premier League and the B.C. Commission on Saturday in Calgary.

In denying the Premier League's request, the CSA executive recommended that the disputants attempt to resolve their differences by continuing negotiations.

"The Premier League asked for non-amateur status and we gave it to them," said Ross.

"The executive was well aware of what this entailed but failed to comply with the constitution as laid down by the Canadian body. We have been caught in the middle of a nasty situation because we're trying to enforce the rules."

Regal president Jack Adams said Tuesday that the fines and suspensions apparently haven't been levied with the approval of the Canadian Soccer Association.

"If the B.C. Commission does not continue negotiaions as requested, we may consider taking legal action," said Adams, who is also a Premier League director.

Playing-coach Brian Hughes was unsure of his status and could not comment on the ruling.

"It appears that the commission is after the team officials, though," Hughes said, "because they have left the players in the clear, providing they don't play while under suspension.'

Regal officials could not say if a game between Vancouver Columbus and Regals, scheduled Saturday at Royal Athletic Park, would be played.

"Undoubtedly there will be many meetings before Saturday," Adams added.

Wilf Sadler of Victoria, a director of the B.C. Soccer Commission who attended Monday's meeting, said that players under suspension had better abide by the rulings so that their careers would not be ruined.

"And there's another point that should be made clear," Sadler said. "The $100 transfer fee is paid directly to the amateur club involved. The B.C. Commission doesn't get one penny out of it."

Ottawa's Gotta Picked CFL Coach of Year

It is the third time in the 12 years the award has been made that it has gone to Ottawa.

Gotta, 41, who has his Rough Riders in a battle with Hamilton Tiger-Cats for first place in the Eastern Football Conference, was named winner of the Annis Stukus trophy Tuesday night at the Edmonton Eskimos' $100-a-plate dinner.

He was selected by his fellow coaches.

Frank Clair, who never missed a playoff berth in 14 consecutive years with the Riders, received the award in 1966 and 1969. Gotta took over as head coach in 1970 when Clair became general manager.

Clair accepted the award on behalf of Gotta, who was not able to attend. He described his coach as "a very dedicated guy . . . who has rebuilt the club."

A tough defence has helped Ottawa clinch a playoff berth with an 8-3 record. All three losses have been to the Tiger-Cats, who hold first place with a 9-3 mark.

After Clair led Ottawa to a 29-11 Grey Cup win over Saskatchewan in 1969 and stepped down, Gotta's 1970 team fell to last place in the east with a 4-10 mark. The Riders struggled to a 6-8 record and third place last year but were dumped, 23-4, by Hamilton in the eastern semi-final.

Gotta

. . . gets Stukus Trophy

Gotta hasn't made many changes in his starting lineup since the season began, with the exception of some shuffling at fullback, where Bob Houmard, Hugh McKinnis and Pete Rizzo have had opportunities.

Gottaa played college ball at Oregon State University and went to Calgary Stampeders in 1956 where he made the Western Football Conference all-star team.

He was traded to Saskatchewan in 1959 and led the team in total passes caught and total yardage gained on passes in 1961, 1962 and 1963. He wound up his playing career with Montreal in 1964 and became an assistant to Eagle Keys at Saskatchewan in 1965.

Gotta joined Clair in Ottawa as an assistant in 1967.

In addition to Clair, previous winners of the award were Leo Cahill, Toronto, 1971; Ray Jauch, Edmonton, 1970; Eagle Keys, Saskatchewan, 1968; Jerry Williams, Calgary, 1967; Bud Grant, Winnipeg, 1965; Ralph Sazio, Hamilton, 1964; Dave Skrien, British Columbia, 1963; Steve Owen, Saskatchewan, 1962 and Jim Trimble, Hamilton, 1961.

Barss Wins Hill Climb

Regular practice on the hills paid off Sunday for Johnathon Barss. Riding the 1.5-mile course in seven minutes flat, Barss won the Victoria Wheelers Bicycle Club's hill climb at John Dean Park.

Tom Morris, a member of Canada's Olympic team, fresh from successful flat racing in Montreal but out of practice in hill climbing, was second, seven seconds behind Barss. Stewart Cox was third in 7:54.

Richard Suffering Nervous Tension

QUEBEC (CP) — Maurice 'Rocket' Richard may relinquish his job as coach of Les Nordiques of the World Hockey Association.

Marius Fortier, general manager of the club, said "there is no way he has resigned" but Richard has been given a one-week leave of absence.

Fortier said Richard had asked for a week off to think over the position because he found the tension so great behind the bench.

Richard was one of the most fiery competitors in the National Hockey League in a career that spanned 18 seasons, all with Montreal Canadiens. He was elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1961.

But apparently the transition from competitor to coach has taken its toll.

"We can't ask Maurice Richard to die behind the bench," Fortier said. "We aren't tyrants.

"And its obvious that this has become a superman task, beyond his powers," he added. "He has visibly lost weight since he's been with us. His morale is very low."

Fortier said that at some points during games the tension in Richard is so great that he no longer knows what's happening as he directs the team.

The general manager said that no matter what decision Richard reaches, he "won't be leaving the team."

"It's now his team and he doesn't want to leave it, but I don't know what his duties will be."

Bob Brownridge Dies of Cancer

CALGARY (CP) — Bob Brownridge, former president of Calgary Centennials in the Western Canada Hockey League, died Tuesday of cancer. He was 54.

The former senior hockey player was the principal backer of Calgary's proposed entry in the World Hockey Association. The idea was dropped when he became ill. Brownridge was a member of a line composed of Ken Hunter and Dune Grant which helped Calgary Stampeders to win the Allan Cup in 1946.

Mt. Douglas Tops In Field Hockey

Mt. Douglas, winners of the Victoria Senior High School Girls' Field Hockey League title, added the playoff crown to its list Tuesday.

Mt. Douglas downed Oak Bay, runner-up in the regular schedule, 3-1, to take the eight-team, two section playoff which determines the six Victoria teams in the two-day Vancouver Island championship starting Friday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

In a battle for third and fourth places, Norfolk House blanked Mount View, 2-0, and Clarement shut out Belmont, 2-0, for fifth and sixth spots. Belmont elliminated Reynolds on Monday with a 3-2 victory while Claremont shaded Victoria, 3-1, to advance into Tuesday's play.

Second in the provincial championship last year, Mt. Douglas compiled a 9-0 record in league play this season, outscoring their opponents, 55-1, in the process and are heavy favorites in the 12-team Island tourney. Representing up-Island are Courtenay, Campbell River, Alberni, Queen Margaret's of Duncan, Cowichan and Strathcona Lodge of Shawnigan Lake.

Top three teams from this weekend's play will advance to the B.C. event Nov. 4 and 5 at Grand Forks.

Hockey Salaries Soaring but Football, Baseball Stars 'Amateurs' by Comparison

By HUBERT MIZELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Bench earns $82,500 a year as catcher of Cincinnati Reds. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar makes about $82,500 a month during the Milwaukee Bucks' basketball season.

Pro basketball's salaries make virtual amateurs of affluent heroes from other sports despite a two-league war that is skyrocketing hockey pay cheques.

Football and baseball stars, many of them living on less than $100,000 a year, suffer by comparison.

Jabbar's incredible $400,000 deal with Milwaukee is trailed handsomely by Walt Frazier's $350,000 from New York Knicks and Jerry West's $300,000 from Los Angeles Lakers.

Charlie Scott jumped from the American Basketball Association to the rival National Association's Phoenix Suns and his fee hit the $300,000 class.

Wilt Chamberlain, a bachelor with a $1 million hilltop castle, read about teammate West's new contract and decided to hold out for renegotiation of his $250,000 salary. He finally was given more than $300,000.

Remember George Mikan? The former DePaul great was voted the top player in basketball for the first half of the 20th century, including a brilliant stint with Minneapolis Lakers.

Mikan, an early giant at 6-feet-10, finally managed to make $20,000 a year in the late 1940s.

And how about Bill Russell? His rookie contract with Boston Celtics was $20,000 in 1956, about the same as Jabbar hauls down for a week of NBA play.

Chamberlain got $65,000 as a rookie with Philadelphia Warriors in 1959-60 and in three seasons later rose to $100,000. Boston, not to let Russell be embarrassed, came up with $100,001.

Basketball has many other high-salaried members, including Pete Maravich of Atlanta, $325,000 a year; Austin Carr of Cleveland, $250,000 and Spencer Haywood of Seattle, and Jim McDaniels, who jumped from the ABA to Seattle, $300,000 each.

A current bidding scuffle between the established National Hockey League and the infant, but well-bankrolled World Hockey Association, has made several hockey players instantly wealthy.

Bobby Hull, the famed Golden Jet of Chicago Black Hawks, was hired at age 32 in a 10-year, $2.7 million player-coach-executive deal by the WHA's Winnipeg Jets.

Meanwhile, Bruin ace Bobby Orr and several other NHL standouts have, as a result of the competition, bagged $1 million deals with their clubs.

Namath is pro football's biggest moneymaker with a $250,000 paycheque from the wellheeled New York Jets, and John Brodie, if the salary guessers are close, makes something like $160,000 with the San Francisco '49ers.

The National Football League has a few superstars in the $100,000 range, including O. J. Simpson, Len Dawson, John Unitas, Jim Plunkett, Archie Manning, Fran Tarkenton and Roman Gabriel.

But, few make more than $100,000, and the NFL Players Association complains that its brothers deserve a larger share of the 26 teams' gross revenue.

The average NFL uarterback makes $41,500. By position, it drops to a $25,500 average for defensive backs and $22,500 for specialists. Not bad, but far below the average salary of $65,000 earned by basketball's New York Knicks.

It was, of course, a bidding war that shot NFL pay to higher levels. College kids got huge bonuses and veterans then doubled their pay overnight.

When the NFL absorbed the American Football League a few year sago, the huge bonuses dropped off and salaries slowed in their streak toq the sky.

Baseball got its first $200,000-a-year performer when Hank Aaron, currently chasing Babe Ruth's career record of 714 rome runs, was signed to a three-year pact in 1971 by Atlanta Braves.

However, the Babe's incredible $80,000 salary in 1928 was — in the pre-income tax era, probably worth more than Jabbar's current $400,000 deal.

Carl Yastrzemski is a $167,000 player for Boston Red Sox, while in the $150,000 class are Willie Mays of New York Mets, Roberto Clemente of Pittsburgh Pirates and Bob Gibson of St. Louis Cardinals.

Ted Williams broke into the $100,000 bracket 15 years ago. Anybody with two great seasons expects that much in the modern market.

You can bet that Johnny Bench will make it when the Reds pay him in 1973 for his deeds of this season which included topping the National League in home runs and runs batted in.

Jack Nicklaus is nearing the $300,000 mark in pro golf. Rod Laver became the first tennis player to earn $1 million, accomplishing it in nine years. Billie Jean King earned $100,000 on the 1971 tennis tour, the first woman athlete to hit such a plateau.

The premier jockeys make more than $250,000, and Pele the Brazilian soccer star, is a millionaire who gets $300,000 from whopping percentages based on how often he plays.

With all this in mind, the modern father doesn't quite know what to do with his young son.

Should he train his hitting eye? Develop a golf swing? Learn to dunk a basketball?

A 17-year-old Victorian who started criminal activity at the age of 11 and had been using drugs for three or four years was sentenced Tuesday in Victoria Provincial Court to a term in an outdoors detention centre.

The youth, Gregory Kenneth Harris, of 55 Oswego, asked for probation so that "I can clean up my act" and because "I don't want to spend the rest of my life in jail." He admitted using about two capsules of heroin a day for almost a year but said he had quit the habit.

Harris said he felt he had the willpower and common sense to stay away from heroin but Judge William Ostler, while sympathetic, said common sense often loses to physical and psychological craving for heroin users.

Oster said Harris was "too young to go it alone." He added that "it is very hard for me to send to custody" any 17-year-old but Harris needed guidance and drew a term of four months definite af eight months indeterminate.

Harris pleaded guilty Sept. 27 to a Victoria charge of breaking and entering an apartment at 103 Menzies the afternoon of the day before and taking stereo equipment and a camera worth a total of about $700.

He also pleaded guilty last Wednesday to a Saanich charge of uttering a $102 welfare cheque about Sept. 8. Prosecutor John Macintyre told court then Harris admitted stealing the cheque from a mailbox on Burdett, saying he "needed it to support his heroin habit."

"Leniency may well be justified" for first offences of cannabis possession, Ostler told John Allan Young, 23, of Mount Hope, Ont., "but there must be some respect shown for the law in these cases."

The Ontarian admitted a previous conviction two years ago in Ontario for possession of marijuana and was sentenced by Ostler to 14 days in jail.

Police are "satisfied there was no sinister motive" when William Robert Kent, 24, of Jordan River, was found in Centennial Square early Sept. 18 with a .303 rifle, said prosecutor Macintyre.

The discovery was made less than four hours before a speech by Progressive Conservative leader Robert Stanfield in the square but, said Macintyre, nothing more than negligence by Kent was suggested by the crown and a nominal penalty was urged.

Kent pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of failing to have a licence for the rifle, laid under the Wildlife Act, and was fined $10. He said he had since obtained a licence, asked for his rifle back and got it.

Tennis Tourney Snub

No Apology from Barrett

There will be no apology from Premier Dave Barrett for the snub his stand-in, MLA Emery Barnes, gave to an international tennis tournament.

"That man acted in true conscience based on principle," Barrett said of Barnes, one of the two black MLAs in the NDP government and a former B.C. Lions footballer.

And if anyone should be embarrassed by the Sunday incident in Vancouver, in which Barnes snubbed the Rothmans' International Tennis Tournament when he learned two South Africans were competing, Barrett said Tuesday it should be South Africa.

"I don't expect any MLA to make judgments against his true conscience.

"Had I known that South Africa was there, I would not have asked him to go.

"Had I known that South Africa was there I would not have gone myself, either," Barrett explained.

After the snub, Barnes said he was acting as an individual who was "opposed to the legislated racial discrimination of a nation."

The incident brought a call Monday from the Social Credit MLA for South Okanagan, Pat Jordan, for Barrett to apologize for allowing politics to mix with sports.

Mrs. Jordan also charged that Barnes had been allowed to "foster racism through the exploitation of innocent individuals."

And as for the claim that the NDP premier was allowing sports and politics to mix, Barrett said:

"Tennis is a professional sport. It is straight entertainment business, period."

Asked if he supported Barnes, who wants South African wines taken off the shelves in B.C. liquor stores, Barrett replied:

"Good on him. I hope he fights for it."

Social Credit has named former labor minister James Chabot as whip, the Liberals Allan Williams and Conservatives Dr. Scott Wallace.

Take Off Fat With Home Recipe Plan

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drugstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Thieves Leave Open Houses

Thieves who have been raiding homes under construction in the Colwood area haven't gone so far yet that they've taken the kitchen sink, Colwood RCMP said Tuesday, but in one case a front door was taken from its permanent position.

Police said something approaching a dozen homes being built had been broken into in the last week or two, with three of the thefts occurring since the start of last weekend.

The $75 door was taken from a home on Jacklin Road, while nine or 10 prefinished doors and two light fixtures vanished from one on Acadia Drive and two aluminum windows disappeared from a third on Rocky Point Road.

Police said contractors and builders are responsible for making sure homes under construction are in the proper shape for their buyers and should take better precautions, especially since thieves are extra busy these days.

Councils To Confer

Recreation Plan

Central Saanich council agreed Monday night to meet Sidney council to discss building of a recreation centre for the Saanich Peninsula on a shared basis with Sidney and North Saanich.

Ald. Percy Lazarz objected to the proposed meeting. "It is a matter of priorities," he said, and explained that other municipal commitments such as sewers, planning and road work were further up the priority ladder than the centre.

He said he was not against the proposed recreation centre, but currently the municipality does not have the funds to take on such a project.

He added that he could see no sense in talking about the project unless the funds were available.

Ald. Ted Clayards stressed the need for the centre on the peninsula and said that the proposed meeting was only to explore the possibilities of how the complex could be built.

No date has been set for the meeting.

Repairing a sidewalk may normally be an uncomplicated task for the city, but when that sidewalk was damaged during the construction of one of Victoria's controversial buildings, difficulties are bound to arise.

City council's public works committee Tuesday discussed ways and means of repairing the sidewalk at View and Quadra which was damaged during construction of the controversial highrise building at that corner.

Some time ago, the city asked Vancouver developer J. A. Mulek to "clean up the mess" adjacent to the completed structure, and to suggest a way of affecting repairs to the damaged sidewalk. Repairs were estimated to cost $9,500.

In a letter to the city, Mulek replied, "We want to cooperate with the city in every way possible and are prepared to accept responsibility for damage to the street and sidewalk resulting from our construction operations on this project."

But Mulek also said there would be further damage when he proceeds with the second part of his project — a twin tower to the existing one. Permanent repair work, he said, should be delayed until after that tower is completed.

The trouble is that the city is trying to prevent construction of the second phase, but it's still questionable whether it can.

If the city repairs the sidewalk and the second phase of the project is abandoned, the city engineer feels he will have a hard time getting the $9,500 from Mulek.

If the second phase proceeds, the sidewalk shouldn't be repaired now, according to the city engineer.

Mayor Peter Pollen told the committee it was immaterial what the developer would build and whether he would build it; the sidewalk should be repaired.

"This man (Mulek) doesn't have a licence to rip up our streets and leave them. The Police said only two of the offices, occupied mostly by doctors, lost anything to thieves who took $150 from one and $30 from another.

City Irritation Over Highrise Hits Sidewalk

Repairing a sidewalk may normally be an uncomplicated task for the city, but when that sidewalk was damaged during the construction of one of Victoria's controversial buildings, difficulties are bound to arise.

City council's public works committee Tuesday discussed ways and means of repairing the sidewalk at View and Quadra which was damaged during construction of the controversial highrise building at that corner.

Mayor Peter Pollen told the committee it was immaterial what the developer would build and whether he would build it; the sidewalk should be repaired.

"This man (Mulek) doesn't have a licence to rip up our streets and leave them. The place is a mess. He (Mulek) has shown no social conscience," he said.

But his motion that the city proceed with the necessary repair work was defeated.

Instead, the committee decided to table the matter for at least two weeks.

Mulek has approval for the project from the previous council, but this council says he must first consolidate his total building site. After that, he could apply for a building permit.

Until now, Mulek hasn't consolidated the site. According to City Engineer James Garnett, "The poor devil doesn't dare consolidate, for fear he will lose the approval given by the previous council."

On the other hand, council has refused to give Mulek assurance that he will get a permit subject to consolidation.

"The poor devil doesn't know where he stands," said Garnett.

Official opening of new Saanich-Victoria Centennial branch library at 880 Seymour was held Monday with provincial and municipal dignitaries in attendance. Post Office Announces New Code of the Mails

Standards of letters which will be able to be sorted by the federal post office's mechanized sorting equipment have been announced by the post office.

But Victoria post office public relations officer Ken Stofer said the new standards won't have much effect on the average individual who wants to mail the odd letter.

The standards are particularly directed toward companies and organizations which handle a large volume of mail.

And, Stofer added, it will be some while before anyone will have to worry about the new standards.

Victoria doesn't yet have mechanized sorting machinery, and there's no specific indication of when it might acquire it, he said.

He explained the standards will be used in conjunction with the postal codes now coming into use.

He said the post office will still accept mail which does not have a postal code on it or does not meet the standards, but it will have to be sorted manually, so it will not likely be processed as quickly.

However, Canada has entered into an international agreement confirming the standards for all international mail, Stofer said, so for international mail, the standards will become mandatory in October, 1973.

B.C. communities are expected to receive their postal codes in late 1973 or early 1974, he said.

A booklet on the new standards, which cover such matters as size of envelopes, correct placing of the address, stamp and code, and proper sealing, will be available through the post office.

Liberty Didn't Last

Shortly before 4:30 p.m. Monday, 24-year-old Victoria resident Robert James McCrae was found guilty in Victoria Provincial Court of shoplifting a number of recordings and allowed to go free pending his sentence Nov. 1.

He went directly from the court building at 633 Fisgard to The Bay about a block away and, at about 4:40 p.m., he was stopped for shoplifting 35 more recordings.

In court Tuesday, McCrae pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200 and was sentenced by Judge William Ostler to four months in jail.

The trial Monday, before Judge F. S. Green, involved 12 recordings worth a total of $83.66 and taken Aug. 22 from Modern Sound Records, 766 Fort.

A security officer for The Bay testified that McCrae, put a large bundle of recordings under his coat at about 4:40 p.m. and added that McCrae "adopted a threatening attitude" when stopped in his car.

Macintyre said he had not opposed McCrae's release Monday because McCrae had a record of only one minor offence since 1967.

He said he regretted his decision, and "the contempt with which he (McCrae) treats the leniency given by this court is absolutely astounding."

Visas S For UV

If the Chinese government agrees to grant visas, a party of 15 students and faculty members from the University of Victoria will spend a month next summer touring China.

The tour is being sponsored jointly by UVic geography department and the Pacific Studies program.

Idea of the tour was developed by professors Bryan Farrell and Hong Kong-born David Cheun-Yan Lai. Last year Lai was invited to spend the summer touring China at the request of the Chinese government. He is a specialist in the industrial geography of China.

Farrell said Tuesday that the Chinese embassy in Ottawa "has been most helpful all along, but there has been plenty of paper work."

Detailed forms must be completed by each visa applicant about national status, whether there are any relatives living in China and if so, their names and addresses.

Farrell said there had been a few minor complications because some of the people interested in the tour had Canadian passports and some had U.S. passports.

City Wants CP Land On Harbor

Marathon Realty, the firm which two years ago appeared to be putting the finishing touches on plans for a $1.5 million Inner Harbor development, now is negotiating with the city of Victoria for the sale of the waterfront property.

Doug Aitken, assistant general manager of Marathon's Vancouver office, will meet this morning with Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to discuss the matter.

Until about two years ago, Marathon Realty, a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, had plans for a major development on the property between Belleville and the waterfront.

At one time, plans included a highrise tower with revolving restaurant on top. These plans were later scaled down.

After several different proposals, the company finally planned to build a number of boutiques, a small shopping centre, a seafood restaurant and a dance pavilion on the 6½ acre site.

But that proposal, too, ran into opposition from city hall. Mayor Peter Pollen, then an alderman, referred to the project as a tourist trap.

The company then announced it wouldn't proceed with its plans "for the time being."

Aiken said in an interview from Vancouver Tuesday that the firm hadn't completely ruled out the possibility of a development, but it appeared that the city would like to purchase the property.

He said he would enter the negotiations with an open mind. All possibilities would be discussed.

Pollen said the "uncertainty over the piece of property is closer to being resolved" than that of any other in the city.

The city would like to purchase the site to assure that this part of the Inner Harbor will remain for pedestrian use only, but the mayor has said previously that the price must be right before the city will buy.

Acquire Parks, Block Bad Projects

Victoria Moves Toward Land Bank

Victoria has taken the first step toward establishing a land bank.

Purpose of the proposed land bank is to acquire choice pieces of property for the city's parks system, and to prevent commercial development in places where it would be detrimental to the public interest.

A complete report on the proposal is being prepared by

The plan was proposed Tuesday to city council's planning committee by Ald. Mike Young, committee chairman.

For a while, the proposal appeared doomed, especially when Mayor Peter Pollen pointed out that unwanted development couldn't possibly be prevented through the mass purchase of property.

The mayor told the committee the city didn't have enough money to buy out every developer whose projects didn't suit the city.

But Young insisted that his land bank proposal be put to a vote. He told the mayor nothing would make him abandon his plan.

Pollen then suggested that it would be far more effective if, for instance, the entire James Bay area were rezoned to R-1 residential. That would freeze development and give the city time to prepare a comprehensive development plan for James Bay.

Pollen had referred specifically to James Bay after Young brought to the committee's attention the plans for a large three-storey frame apartment building at Dallas and Dock. That development, Young said, was not in the public interest, but there was nothing council could do to stop it.

He said the site on which the apartment would be built was an example of the kind of property the city could purchase with land bank funds.

"But that takes the kind of guts you don't find around here," the mayor added.

Young then said he didn't care what the mayor wanted to talk about. "I want to discuss the land bank."

Pollen dropped the subject of wholesale rezoning of James Bay and the committee voted in favor of requesting the report on the details of establishing a land bank.

One area in which funds from a land bank could be used, according td City Engineer James Garnett, was the purchase of land needed for civic projects, such as road construction.

He told the committee that in many cases, the city was forced to buy land for such purposes only when it was ready to proceed with construction.

Visas Still Problem For UVic China Tour

If the Chinese government agrees to grant visas, a party of 15 students and faculty members from the University of Victoria will spend a month next summer touring China.

The tour is being sponsored jointly by UVic geography department and the Pacific Studies program.

Idea of the tour was developed by professors Bryan Farrell and Hong Kong-born David Cheun-Yan Lai. Last year Lai was invited to spend the summer touring China at the request of the Chinese government. He is a specialist in the industrial geography of China.

Farrell said Tuesday that the Chinese embassy in Ottawa "has been most helpful all along, but there has been plenty of paper work."

Detailed forms must be completed by each visa applicant about national status, whether there are any relatives living in China and if so, their names and addresses.

Farrell said there had been a few minor complications because some of the people interested in the tour had Canadian passports and some had U.S. passports.

A number of Canadian-born Chinese students have applied to make the trip, but Farrell and Lai won't know exactly how many people are interested until applications close at the end of the month.

Total cost of the month-long trip, including all transportation, meals and accommodation, is expected to be under $1,300 each. Farrell said he would welcome any members of the community who wanted to make the tour.

Although the tour is planned for next summer, early application is necessary as all correspondence is conducted in Chinese and the applications are vetted by both the Chinese embassy in Ottawa and the Chinese government.

The party will fly to Hong Kong and spend time there before travelling by train to Canton. Tentative plans call for visits to a number of major Chinese industrial centres and also to the capital Peking.

On the return journey the party will spend a few extra days in Hong Kong before flying home.

Free School Loses Appeal of Closure

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

"It's like a black spot has been put on earth here ... I don't know what we'll do now or what they'll do to us."

"Here" is the site of the former Saturna Island Free School, at Boot Cove on Saturna Island, and the words came from William Sheffeld, former director of the school who had learned late Tuesday that its appeal against a Greater Victoria health board closure order had been dismissed in Victoria County Court.

In a written judgment handed down earlier in the day Judge M. L. T. Drake said that in his view, "the evidence ... is overwhelming in justifying the making of the order."

He also rejected three arguments of the school's lawyers that the order had been legally bad.

The order in question had been given to the school Aug. 16, 1971 and had ordered that the premises be vacated by the end of that month.

The school which opened in 1968 housed up to 24 children from seven to 17, and operated in an unstructured manner with no formal curriculum or rules for the students. Fees were between $1,000 and $1,250 a year.

The premises involved were an 80-year-old farmhouse which was the main building of the school and several outbuildings attached to it, and the grounds given for the order were various unsanitary conditions there.

Sheffeld said that as a result of the order, the school itself had not re-opened for the 1971-72 or 1972-73 terms, but, since the appeal was pending, the premises had not been completely vacated.

He and his family and the families of other former school staff members had continued to live, with some farm animals, on the 30-acre farm site, and "we will try to do whatever we can to keep on living here ourselves."

If an appeal was possible from Drake's decision, it would probably be taken, he said, but before making a firm decision on this, he would have to consult with his lawyer, William Sigurgeirson of Vancouver.

The staff had hoped to reopen the school, "but it looks a bit bleak now," he said.

It was not clear what would happen next in the proceedings. Sheffeld said he did not know if they would now have to vacate the premises completely, what would have to happen in terms of standards to allow them to be inhabited again, how much time they would have before vacating, or how any eviction would be carried out.

Neither was he sure what would happen if the property was sold if someone else wanted to live in it.

In the judgment, Drake wrote that it appeared that until late 1969, after the school had survived another closure order by the health board, "the requirements of the health officers as to sanitary arrangements brought about considerable efforts" at the school.

After qualified approval had been given in late 1969, however, "it seems a more relaxed attitude prevailed at the school ... it is evident that the Zenonian dictum as to man's special genius lying in his capacity for repose became the guiding principle of those concerned with housekeeping at the establishment."

Drake wrote his judgment after a two-day hearing of the case Sept. 26 and 27. The health board was represented by lawyer Cecil Branson.

Close Enough to Poke Eye

"I was taking rather violent evasive action and I could have put my arm out the window and poked him in the eye — it was that close."

That was how George Fraser of 1410 Wain Road, North Saanich, described Tuesday night how close a small pickup truck he was driving came to meeting a large old convertible head-on.

Fraser was testifying at the second session of an inquest into the deaths early Sept. 17 of Douglas Bruce Barkley, 24, of 3119 Rutledge, Saanich, and Dennis Robert Nels Halstrom, 25, of 971 Jasmine, Saanich, who were in a small car behind Fraser's.

The small car met head-on with the convertible on the Trans-Canada Highway about half a mile north of Thetis Lake Park.

Fraser told the six-man jury that he had just finished overtaking the station wagon on the northbound side of the road when he saw the southbound convertible approaching on the wrong side of the road.

He was able to swerve his vehicle aside.

Lawyer Kenneth Murphy, in cross-examination, established that the occupants of the convertible had been drinking before the crash. The inquest continues 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Victoria Law Courts building.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have a 20-year-old daughter. The other day, out of a clear sky, she said, "I want to tell you something so you won't be surprised when it happens. I am not going to live very long." Then she pointed to the lifeline on the palm of her hand and said, "There it is — plain as can be. My lifeline is crossed by another line about one fourth the way across the palm, which means a very short life."

I tried to persuade her that palm reading is bunk, that there is no significance to it whatever, but she is unconvinced. Can you give me some facts that will ease my mind? If YOU said it, she might believe it. Please, Ann. —Mother In Distress

Dear Mother: Everybody knows somebody who went to a fortune teller, a tea leaf reader, a palmist, a crystal gazer or an astrologist, and was told something that came true. It was a combination of guesswork, coincidence, happenstance, exaggeration, imagination, adding facts, deleting facts — and it is without validity.

There is no scientific basis for palm reading or kindred fields that predict the future. Tell your daughter to use her head. If those Gypsy fortune tellers could predict the future they'd be out at a racetrack or the gaming tables instead of sitting in those hot tents reading palms for a dollar a pop. Many an octogenarian has been buried with a short lifeline, according to a relative of mine who is a funeral director.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm 16 and the original girl who can't say "no." They call me "Rosie Roundheels" and make a joke of it, but it's not funny. My reputation is bad and I'm scared to death my folks will get wind of it. Every time I go out with a different guy I say to myself, "This time I'm going to be a lady." But one kiss and I'm a goner. Don't tell me to get professional help. Give me some practical advice. Want To Be Good

Dear Want To: I know of no shortcuts or easy solutions to a problem that goes back 16 years. It will take a lot of hard work to get rid of this klinker in your thinker but unless you do your life could be a mess. Start talking with your school counsellor and good luck.

□

Dear Ann: The supervisor at the loading dock asked me if I'd sit with his infant son while he and his wife went to a reception. Their babysitter conked out. I agreed, although I had very little sleep the night before and was dead tired. The kid started to cry so I decided to entertain him by pinning a bath towel around myself like a diaper. I put on his bib and bonnett and stuck his bottle in my mouth and pretended to drink it. When the boss and his wife returned the kid was screaming and I was asleep on the couch in that stupid outfit. How do I got my job back?— Canned.

Dear Canned: Plead temporary insanity.

The Whats and Whys of Food Additives

By The Canadian Press

Additives, refining, health foods are all the cause of a lot of concern for a lot of people nowadays. People worry about eating too many chemicals, about all the food value being refined out of what they eat, about whether they should eat "natural" foods.

The health protection branch of the department of national health and welfare has put together a kit that explains in simple terms the whats and whys of such current bugaboos.

In a look at additives, the department notes that salt, water, vinegar and sugar are all chemicals and serve a useful purpose, as do additives.

There are several reasons for using additives in foods. One is to improve texture and stability.

Stabilizers do such jobs as keeping particles such as chocolate from settling in liquids such as chocolate milk.

Thickeners provide body to cheese spread and gravies.

Preserving is still done in old ways, by smoking, pickling, salting and sun drying. In addition, additives are used to control the growth of yeast, bacteria and mould in cereals, baked goods and dairy products.

They are used to prevent fats from becoming rancid, to keep flavor and quality during periods of transportation and storage.

The department tests additives on animals, takes the highest level at which there is no effect, and divides by 100 to get the amount allowed in food for people. It has 14 lists of additives that say what may be added to which foods.

A background paper on refining foods says that it is mainly cereals, sugars and fats that are refined.

They are treated to ensure the food is wholesome. Refining helps prevent oils from turning rancid. It helps add shelf life to a product. For instance, white flour is almost free of fat and can be stored for a longer time then unrefined flour.

Refining may improve appearance and flavor.

It helps provide a variety of products, so that people may enjoy whole wheat bread as well as white.

Refining does remove nutrients from foods, but replacement is possible by enrichment.

The health protection branch controls food enrichment, making it mandatory in certain instances.

Foods are sometimes enriched where there is an insufficient intake of a given nutrient in the average diet. The iodine in salt is an example.

Food may be enriched if it replaces another food that is normally an important source of nutrients, for instance, margarine for butter. Food also may be enriched if it is a staple, such as flour, which is altered in the refining process.

Limits are set on both maximum and minimum amounts of specified nutrients which may be added to a food.

Another paper discusses foods that are believed by some people to have almost magical properties. In Canada, the food and drug directorate has control over claims in advertising.

The kit explains you can get as much vitamin B1 from four ounces of roast pork as from 1½ teaspoons of brewer's yeast.

Blackstrap molasses, a by-product of sugar, is a source of iron, but of little else. Other iron sources such as meat, eggs and green vegetables offer other nutrients as well.

Rose hips are a rich source of vitamin C, but so are tomatoes, oranges, grapefruit and Mystique, is designed for high broccoli, which are cheaper.

The whole kit, called Food school audiences. It uses slide and written material.

Una Evans talks with voter

Edmonton Woman

Campaigning Non-Stop

EDMONTON (CP) — Una MacLean Evans is "running" for Parliament.

Her campaign pace on any given day is quick, steady and virtually non-stop.

At 7:30 a.m., in a pickup truck driven by an NDP supporter, the Liberal candidate in Edmonton East headed for the United Grain Growers plant "to meet the eight o'clock shift." About 10 p.m., at a Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' banquet where her newspaper columnist husband was guest speaker, she began thinking of going home.

And that was a relatively easy day, said Bob Stewart, her 29-year-old aide.

"Normally she's running to 12:30 or 1 a.m.," Stewart said. "Then she's up again at 6.

"The fever of it sort of catches you up though. Excitement builds and you forget how tired you are."

Mrs. Evans, 46, a member of Edmonton's city council for the last six years, is running against Conservative Bill Skoreyko, who has represented the riding for the last 14 years. Also contesting the seat in the Oct. 30 federal election are New Democrat Ashley Pachal, Social Credit's Nick Eenyk and Communist W. A. Tuomi.

By noon, Mrs. Evans had met about 300 people — one by one.

All kinds of people. Men shovelling sawdust in a construction plant. Students on their way to school. Women waiting at bus stops. Oil-covered mechanics in service stations.

Does she dislike the trappings of politics?

"Of course I dislike it. I don't like the hoopla and the balloons and the little kids dancing.

"There's so much about a national election that's false, and I hate it."

She was national president of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs from 1960 to 1962 and has served as an executive officer of the Liberal party at the federal and provincial levels.

Levis Still Have Long Way to Go

By EUGENIA SHEPPARD

NEW YORK — When American store buyers arrive in Paris soon for those every-six-months ready-to-wear fashion collections, they'll find a familiar name, Miss Levi, on one of the most fascinating invitations. Though Miss Levi is definitely European, her family tree sprouted in the Wild West of the 1840s when the original Levi Strauss started dressing the original gold diggers.

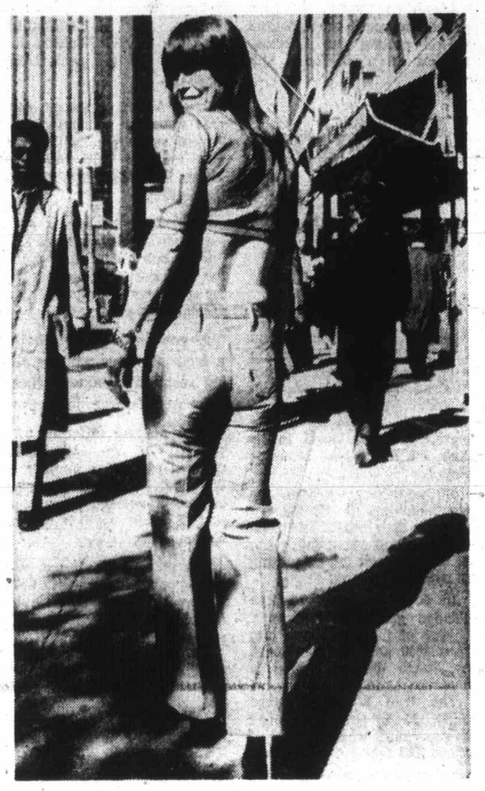
Since then, Levis have come a longe way. They were the flag of the youth revolution. They have taken over Europe in a big way and last summer, faded and torn, they were the rage of St. Tropez. Who would have ever thought, though, that Levis would become a major attraction at Paris collection time, and who could possibly expect to see them presented at a show in the Crazy Horse Saloon, the most famous strip-tease nightclub in the city?

Naturally, they won't be just the classic Levis, though these will be included in the show that will have the Crazy Horse beauties as models. The Miss Levi collection, European division, has a slightly new slant on both fit and fabrics.

"We call it the return of the bustle look. We are concentrating on the navel, the hipbones and the behind," says David Credle, head of the European operation. He is here this week with his merchandise manager, one of his two designers and most of his new collection.

With minor variations, the Levis all have the same look. Like the originals, the waistbands rest just below the navel. The hips and thighs are as tight as the cowboys wear them and they flare a little from just above the knees.

"We have feminized them a little and minimized the details," says Carola Witte, the young designer who comes from Berlin. Though the familiar yoke is still there, the back pocket has become a miniature. Some of the details that make the eight different styles individual are a stitched diamond or lacings to emphasize the rear view, two or more inches difference in the flare of the legs and four seams instead of two for a square look.



Back view is important

The big change is in the fabrics. Instead of denim and more denim, Miss Levi has gone into all kinds of European fabrics, just as long as they're washable. Carola's own favorite is the pink polyester and cotton pants, though she has a choice of corduroy, pin-striped washable flannel and a heavy chambray stitched in red that's first cousin to the original jeans.

So many people who saw the European Miss Levis wished there were tops to go with them that David Credle felt moved to oblige. The tops are mostly battle jackets, some in stretch fabrics that have elastic waistbands but leave the navel bare. So do the cotton baby smocks.

After the smocks and jackets came the knitted tops in all kinds of stretch acrylics, all skin tight and often just covering the bosom. They wear their own embroidered logo, something like the famous Lacoste alligator. It simply says Levis.

To say that Miss Levi is all over Europe is putting it mildly. There are a dozen or so Miss Levi shops through Holland, Belgium and Germany, and Italy and Spain are just opening up. In England, where they are sold in Harrods's Way In Shop, the Levis cost from $10 to under $24 and the tops are around $7. Miss Levi believes that prices ought to stay low enough for any girl to be able to buy three.

Though it may seem a sacrilege at first even to think of Levis in fashion fabrics with female details, there are plenty of men who don't feel that way about it. Any number of them have crashed the Way In department and even the Miss Levi shops. The tight-hipped fit is familiar. They like the colors. The pants are even cut long enough. Miss Levi has added a couple of inches since most girls nowadays wear them with platform soles. It's quite a switch on these days when the girls first fell for the cowboys and started wearing their jeans.

Judy Masterful on Feminism

Judy LaMarsh, in a tradition-breaking foray Monday night, gave private school headmasters a two-fisted and sometimes jocular briefing on feminism.

Miss LaMarsh became the first woman ever to speak before the Canadian Headmasters' Association which met at St. Micheal's University School, 3400 Richmond.

She kept her audience of about 85 persons attentive during her 25-minute talk in which she described how children, from childbirth, are conditioned to accept traditional sexual roles.

The august assembly broke into peals of laughter as it received a liberal sprinkling of the former Secretary of State's well-known humor, such as:

"You are not only the privileged class but you are probably sons of the privileged class," she scolded the headmasters.

"I have no objection to the privileged class. I just have a sort of regret I'm not one of them."

Or, when speaking against use of feminine charms to further one's career: "I don't have to (be intimate) with every man I work with in the radio station I work at. They'll be glad to hear it."

Miss LaMarsh told the headmasters that graduates from their schools are likely to become leaders of their society and the teachers are to be commended for their dedication to the boys.

But, she said, private schools for girls teach their students to serve tea, to be "a lady" and how to compete for an eligible husband.

"If she's taught from the time she's a baby that her only fulfilment is to be attached to a man ... she is only partly fulfilled," she said.

Miss LaMarsh said elementary school texts are subtlely sexist in nature, noting that boys in the books are usually portrayed as aggressive while girls are passive. She said girls are often later barred from such courses as drafting.

"It is my hope that over the next 20 to 50 years, there will be a galloping growth of opportunity for women. We shall produce equal people."

Allergy Sufferers Less Cancer-Prone

MONTREAL (CP) — Statistics show that allergy sufferers may be less likely to develop cancer than non-sufferers, Dr. G. H. Strejan, an allergy researcher at the University of Western Ontario, told the International Symposium on Hypersensitivity Monday.

Strejan said only three per cent of people who have cancer have allergies. He said the incidence in the general population is three times that percentage.

"A person with an allergy produces large amounts of a specific antibody and this may be connected with the ability to reject malignant tumors."

The doctor said the possible connection between allergies and the ability to resist cancer is still theoretical.

Dr. Brant Rose, in whose honor the symposium is being held, told the conference antibodies are the body's natural defences against harmful foreign substances. But, in allergies, a special class of antibodies is formed which attacks harmful substances.

Dr. Philip S. Norman of John Hopkins University in Baltimore, told the symposium that a new allergy test involving just one injection instead of 20 is to be made available within the next two years.

The new test will produce less risk, discomfort and waiting time for the patient, he said.

Six Young Essayists Commended

Six Vancouver Island students and their teachers will be honored by the Vancouver Island branch, Royal Commonwealth Society, at a buffet luncheon meeting in the YM-YWCA at noon Thursday.

The six were awarded "highly commended" or "commended" notice in competition against 410 other entrants from all over the world in the society's 1971-72 essay contest. All previously won prizes in a preliminary contest held among B.C. school students.

They include Christine Reder of Victoria, a student then at St. Ann's secondary school; four students from A. W. Neill junior secondary, Port Alberni, and one from Wood elementary, Port Alberni.

Teacher First In Walkathon

NANAIMO — Neil Dillabaugh, a Departure Bay elementary school teacher, was first over the finish line when 600 people joined the annual 8.5 mile United Appeal walkathon. Pledge totals are not yet known.

Rug Shipment Reaches U.S.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The first Oriental rugs from China to arrive in the United States in more than 30 years were due to be unloaded Tuesday from the steamship Idaho.

The 22 rugs, described as "exquisitely beautiful," were hand-made in Tientsen, the rug capital of China, and were valued in excess of $50,000. They were imported by May Lee Industries, the first American firm to sign trade agreements with China at last April's Canton trade fair.

Three Pounds Annually

B.C. Loves Mushrooms

Did you know that British Columbians are the world's biggest per capita consumers of mushrooms? They eat three pounds of mushrooms per person per year. Those figures come from B.C. Food Information, a provincial (Government) publication.

To meet this demand, 63 growers from Lulu Island to Rosedale produced more than four million pounds of mushrooms last year, for a record year, and this year this total is expected to be surpassed.

Mushrooms are one of the most versatile of vegetables. They can be sauteed, creamed, stewed whole or sliced. Steak and mushrooms is a classic but they can also lift a lowly stew into the gourmet class. Gaining in popularity is the use of raw mushrooms in salads and as hors d'oeuvres. They also add a subtle flavor to casserole dishes.

To prepare for use, wash with a light stream of cold water and then sprinkle with lemon juice to prevent the mushroom from turning dark.

The mushroom is a good source of protein, iron, thiamin, riboflavin and niacin. It is low in calories, carbohydrates, calcium and ascorbic acid.

It is said that Louis XIV of France encouraged the first known modern cultivation of mushrooms in the 17th century. By 1900, some 1,500 miles of mushroom beds were under cultivation in caves outside Paris. From there, the industry spread throughout the western world.

Following is a recipe that combines the two leaders.

MUSHROOM POTATO CASSEROLE

4 large cooked B.C. potatoes, salt, pepper and butter to taste, 1 package fresh spinach, ½ cup fresh mushrooms, ½ cup sour cream, ¼ cup potato chip crumbs.

Mash potatoes, add seasoning. Cook spinach, drain. Combine potato, spinach, mushrooms and sour cream. Place in greased casserole. Top with crumbs. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes.

MUSHROOM POLONAISE

3 tablespoons butter, 1 pound fresh mushrooms, salt and pepper, 1 clove garlic, minced, 1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley, 1 cup sour cream.

Melt butter, add garlic, mushrooms, salt and pepper. Saute, stirring frequently until tender. Sprinkle with parsley. Remove from heat, fold in sour cream. Serve warm as a vegetable or on toast, or serve as side dish, chilled.

MUSHROOM — STUFFED PORK CHOPS

½ pound fresh B.C. mushrooms, chopped, ¼ cup chopped green pepper, 1 small onion, chopped, ¼ cup chopped almonds, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 6 thick pork chops.

Saute mushrooms, green pepper, and onion in butter for 5 minutes. Add salt and pepper. Stuff pork chops with mushroom mixture. Place pork chops on rack in oven and bake at 350 degrees for 1¼ hours.

SUKIYAKI

1½ pounds round steak, cut in thin strips, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced, 1 large onion, sliced thin, 1 cup sliced celery, 6 green onions cut in 1-inch pieces, 1 pound fresh broccoli, cut in strips, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon fresh ground pepper.

SUKIYAKI SAUCE

⅛ cup soya sauce, ½ cup beef bouillon, 2 teaspoons sugar.

Brown beef strips in butter 3 to 4 minutes. Add vegetables and sprinkle with sugar and pepper. Mix sauce and pour half over meat and vegetables. Turn frequently. Add remaining sauce as needed. Cook for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve with hot rice.

MARINATED MUSHROOMS

1 pound fresh B.C. mushrooms, 1½ cups vinegar, ½ cup olive oil, ½ onion chopped finely, 1 teaspoon basil leaves, ¼ cup minced parsley, 1 teaspoon mustard seed, ½ teaspoon dill weed, 1 tablespoon sugar.

Wash mushrooms. Slice the large ones. Place in bowl. Combine remaining ingredients, mixing well. Pour over mushrooms. Marinate in refrigerator for 24 hours. Drain and serve.

Job I Show 'Mise

Allan McKinnon, Progressive Conservative candidate for Victoria riding, says the claims by Prime Minister Trudeau that Canada's job creation leads the industrialized world have a false appearance of truth.

In a press release Tuesday, McKinnon said that "western European countries are already in a full-employment situation and their labor force has a virtually zero growth rate. These countries have no need to create jobs at the rate that is necessary for Canada.

"The only industrialized country with a labor force growth rate comparable to that of Canada is the U.S., and here the comparison makes the miserable performance of the Trudeau government glaringly evident.

"Over the year ended September, 1972, employment in Canada increased by 2.4 per cent, or by 193,000 jobs. During the same period in the U.S. it increased 3.5 per cent, or by 2,739,000 jobs.

"During the 51 months Trudeau has been in power (June 20, 1968, to Sept. 20, 1972), 776,000 new jobs were created. In the 51 months before Trudeau, March, 1964, to June, 1968, 959,000 new jobs were created," the statement said.

Dan Heffernan, Progressive Independent candidate for Victoria, said in a press release that he would like to see "the 76 per cent of the family allowance cheques that are being given to families that don't need them, be given to the 24 per cent that do need them."

Heffernan's statement added that it was "ridiculous that since 1946 the cost of living has gone up 111 per cent when family allowance has only gone up 15 per cent. I think it is only right that families in need should receive these cheques."

□

David Groos, Liberal candidate for Victoria, said in a press release Tuesday that he was "often asked why a voter in Victoria should support the Liberal government."

The statement said, "I think it hasn't been put across to the public clearly enough that the Liberal government under Pierre Trudeau has proven that it can act strongly and decisively when occasion demands it.

"One example of this was the FLQ crisis in Quebec in the fall of 1970. We all remember those dreadful days of the kidnappings when the government was faced with the need to take fast action. Trudeau acted quickly and I think most Canadians will agree that his actions were as effective as any which could have been taken by any government.

Job Rate Showing 'Miserable'

Trudeau acted quickly and I think most Canadians will agree that his actions were as effective as any which could have been taken by any government.

"Another example of taking the lead, and taking strong action, was the Trudeau government leading the way in recognizing mainland China.

"Another crisis which faced the Trudeau government was the economic actions of the U.S. in 1971 when they devalued their dollar and took certain other steps which made it much more difficult for Canadian goods to be traded in U.S. markets. The economic actions taken by Canada in dealing reasonably with the U.S. and recognizing its problems, have resulted in the maintenance of employment levels without the disruption of our most valuable trade relationship . . . I am sure the voters of Victoria will remember these on election day."

Mike Hall-Patch, independent candidate for Victoria, said in a press release that on the question of law and order, "I'm for it."

The statement said, "I am not excited by cries of police brutality and harassment. Far more people, especially in lower income brackets, suffer greater inconvenience at the hands of bill collectors, all quite legally, than they ever will at the hands of policemen."

Louis Lindholm, Liberal candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said in a press release Tuesday that he had sent telegram to federal and provincial ministers in an effort to resolve the problem of access to Victoria International Airport from the Pat Bay Highway.

In a telegram to federal Transport Minister Donald Jamieson, Lindholm said: "I believe this community should have direct access from the Pat Bay Highway to Victoria International Airport, rather than have to follow the present, zig-zag, hard-to-find course . . . I am today asking the minister of highways for B.C. to agree to pay half the cost. Would you let me have a favorable response as soon as possible."

Lindholm's statement said that his telegram to B.C. Highways Minister Robert Strachan mentioned the same zig-zag course and that he had asked the federal government to share costs of a direct access 50-50 with the province.

Special Section for Waiting Room Reading

Doctor's Paper Blasts Report

B.C. Medcal Association has just published a news sheet that contains several attacks on the Hastings Report, a study commissioned by the federal government which recommends community health centres.

The report that was prepared by a group under the chairmanship of Dr. John Hastings of the University of Toronto has been described by some authorities as the blueprint for most of Canada's future health services.

However, the current edition of BCMA News contains articles that indicate there might be substantial resistance to the Hastings Report among physicians in British Columbia, where the New Democratic Party government may use its recommendations to a great extent in assembling a "master plan" of future health services and facilities.

In any case, one of the most interesting lines of type in the current BCMA News is that which says: "The Inner Section Has Been Designed for Waiting Rooms." This means doctors might remove the centre section of the tabloid—the pages on which the Hastings study is criticized—and leave them in the open for patients to read.

"There is little support in the report for the sweeping statements that community health centres would increase productivity, control quality and prevent duplication of services," writes Dr. F. W. B. Hurlburt, chief of medicine at St. Paul's Hospital Vancouver.

". . . Undoubtedly, there is sone truth in the statements, but they imply that the best way to achieve these ends is to sweep aside the present, unorganized structure, substituting a totally new one with controls, not only by government but by various lay boards and administrative bodies."

Hurlburt states that the health professions would be tied to a tight set of regulations that would interfere with their freedom of action and choice, "which traditionally is inherent in the responsibilities given to a profession."

Under the pseudonym of Tacitus, another physician claims that the Hastings concept "appears to be that, regardless of what the problem may be, regardless of the extent to which the individual may be able to cope with this problem for himself, the staff of the community health centre should be able and willing to take it off his shoulders and solve it for him."

"The report is no blueprint for establishing what it proposes," the author continues. "It is peppered with sweeping generalizations and totalling lacking in detailed consideration of the practical obstacles along the way.

"Vague, idealistic in concept and delightfully nebulous where hard facts are concerned, it reads almost like a promotional piece for a foregone conclusion."

The BCMA News was launched last year during difficult negotiations between the physicians and provincial government over fee increases. The official voice of the B.C. Medical Association is the B.C. Medical Journal, which has often published articles that criticize those appearing earlier in the BCMA News.

The BCMA's board of directors has given the Hastings Report to a committee for review and a report, which has not yet been received by the board.

Most doctors have only seen the version of the Hastings Report that was published by the Canadian Medical Association, which omits a list of references that run over 40 typewritten pages.

Good Weather, Good Catches

With the perfect weather last weekend, very good fishing was found in the Sooke, Beechey Head and Becher Bay waters.

Several coho in the 15 to 18-pound range were boated, and on Tuesday morning a 19-pound winter spring was taken in Becher Bay waters. Norm Perry, 912 Kingsmill, was one of the successful Sunday anglers, returning with three coho, the heaviest a 14-pounder. He was fishing near Church Rock using minnow.

The NDP government is seeking control over tobacco marketing and promotion in a bill introduced by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald in the Legislature Tuesday.

The bill, given first reading, gives the government power to control the packaging, labelling, selling, distribution, advertising and promotion of tobacco and tobacco products within the province.

Under the Tobacco Products Act, as it will be known when it passes, it will be an offence to deceive or mislead a consumer or purchaser of tobacco as to the character, toxicity, composition, merit or safety of the product.

The Legislature grappled briefly Tuesday with the issue of reform of its rules and procedures, but resolved in the end to make haste slowly.

Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall introduced a proposed Legislative Procedure and Practice Inquiry Act at the opening session. The bill will give newly elected Speaker Gordon Dowding powers of a special commissioner to conduct a study of practices in other jurisdictions and report back to the spring session.

But Liberal leader David Anderson felt there should be an oral question period beginning immediately. His motion was ruled out of order by Dowding, and Anderson later told reporters this was "a major disappointment."

Counter-Nomination Flops

Gardom Dampens Socreds

A Social Credit firecracker fizzled out in the Legislature opening Tuesday afternoon.

After listening to the NDP nominate Gordon Dowding, Burnaby-Edmonds MLA, for the speaker's job, former labor minister James Chabot put forward the name of Liberal Garde Gardom for the same position.

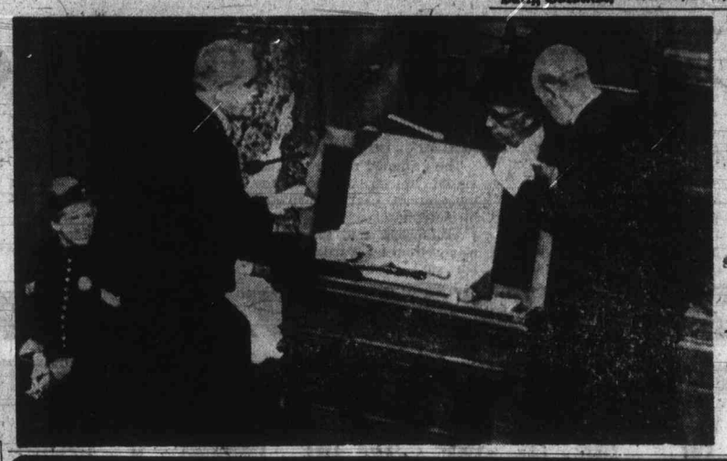
Chabot smoothly caught all except his Socred colleagues by surprise, but the move fizzled after a few words from Gardom.

Gardom, Liberal MLA for Vancouver Point Grey, said the move showed up the "inconsistency of political times and ties" and promptly declined.

In the 1970 session, Gardom was also unsuccessfully nominated but then, he said, he was asked in advance by the NDP.

This time, he told the house, he had no knowledge of the Socred nomination bid.

Dowding was named Speaker a few minutes later, to desk-thumping applause from NDP benches.



PRACTICAL note injected into traditional ceremony of Tuesday's opening of special session of B.C. legislature came after Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) was elected speaker. With help of two sergeants-at-arms, Dowding then had to fill his hinged-topped desk with documents, books and other items required to fill speaker's job.

Tobacco Bill

B.C. Plans Teeth To Regulate Industry

The NDP government is seeking control over tobacco marketing and promotion in a bill introduced by Attorney-General Alex Macdonald in the Legislature Tuesday.

The bill, given first reading, gives the government power to control the packaging, labelling, selling, distribution, advertising and promotion of tobacco and tobacco products within the province.

Under the Tobacco Products Act, as it will be known when it passes, it will be an offence to deceive or mislead a consumer or purchaser of tobacco as to the character, toxicity, composition, merit or safety of the product.

The bill aims to protect the health of consumers of tobacco, including snuff.

Those who contravene its sections face a $500 fine for a first offence or imprisonment for up to three months, or both.

A second offence will bring a fine of up to $1,000 or a jail term of six months, or both.

The bill also provides for the attorney-general to apply to a Supreme Court justice for an injunction to stop any person guilty of an offence under the act continuing to deal in tobacco.

New regulations will also be set up under the act governing labelling, packaging and analysing of tobacco, and advertising and distribution, and requiring wholesalers, manufacturers and distributors to provide tobacco samples for analysis.

Macdonald also introduced bills to abolish the liquor and cigarette advertising bans imposed in September, 1971, by the former Social Credit government.

Observer Role To Bangladesh

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has awarded official observer status at the Unted Nations to the new state of Bangladesh, a U.N. spokesman said. The spokesman said a representative of Bangladesh requested the status on Oct. 1, and the secretary general took his decision last Thursday.

New Rules Await Study

The Legislature grappled briefly Tuesday with the issue of reform of its rules and procedures, but resolved in the end to make haste slowly.

Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall introduced a proposed Legislative Procedure and Practice Inquiry Act at the opening session. The bill will give newly elected Speaker Gordon Dowding powers of a special commissioner to conduct a study of practices in other jurisdictions and report back to the spring session.

But Liberal leader David Anderson felt there should be an oral question period beginning immediately. His motion was ruled out of order by Dowding, and Anderson later told reporters this was "a major disappointment."

Premier Barrett said in an interview: "Anybody who says this can be changed and that can be changed is absolutely correct. But the method we're selecting is the complete opposite direction of what we've been used to in the past 20 years. We're not changing anything until the house as a whole sits and discusses it and agrees or disagrees."

After visiting other legislatures to study their rules and practices, Barrett said, Dowding will draft a series of proposed reforms for the B.C. house which will be sent to an all-party committee for further study at the next session. The committee's recommendations will be brought back to the house for final debate before implementation.

"This government won't arbitrarily change the rules," Barrett said. "Some of us have fixed opinions of the reforms we want, and I certainly hope they will eventually be put into effect. But we have come from a house which in the past saw changes made and then announced. I'd rather wait and do it absolutely correctly."

EIGHT PLEDGES

The Trudeau policy as announced by Mr. Edgar Benson in 1970, and which is still being followed, is that "higher unemployment . . . might be necessary if we are going to beat inflation." Not only that, most of his other policies have also had deplorable effects.

The Progressive Conservative Party contends that no government has the right cynically to accept mass unemployment, or throw hundreds of thousands of Canadians onto the streets as a human sacrifice to an uncertain statistical victory.

IN SHARP CONTRAST WITH THE TRUDEAU RECORD, A PROGRESSIVE CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENT WOULD:

★ Institute a 15-point program to create jobs and revitalize the economy.
★ Cut personal income taxes.
★ Increase the old age BASIC pension by $15.00.
★ Change welfare policies so that it would be to the individual's advantage to go to work.
★ Lengthen the unemployment insurance qualifying period.
★ Revise the Taxation Act.
★ Pass an anti-pollution act with teeth.
★ (And, incidentally, we would accept the resignation of Mr. Benson as head of the Canadian Transportation Commission.)

Tory Charges Inferior Aides Cramped Warden's Rule

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Progressive Conservative candidate in the Oct. 30 election released a report Monday which states that a chain of incompetent or inexperienced officials has stripped Warden Donald Clark of his disciplinary powers at Millhaven prison.

The report, released by A. Douglas Alkenbrack, Conservative member for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington in the last parliament, says control of Millhaven's 365 prisoners is impossible under conditions imposed by Ottawa.

The unsigned report was released at an all-candidates meeting in nearby Napanee by Alkenbrack.

Alkenbrack said the report was written by Warden Clark, but said the warden called him Tuesday and denied being the author.

"He's afraid of getting fired, but we'll stand between him and all harm," said Alkenbrack.

Meanwhile, in Montreal, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Tuesday he has been told that the warden never made any such statements.

Goyer criticized Alkenbrack, saying: "I deplore the fact that an MP is playing with the truth and misleading the public with such a report. I'm assured that Mr. Clark never wrote such a letter."

Alkenbrack said the report indicated the warden expected further trouble from prisoners, many of them veterans of the 500-man Kingston penitentiary riot in April, 1971, that left two dead and 11 injured.

The report said the rioters were never punished for their behavior at the old prison and when Millhaven was opened prematurely to house them, they brought the same "mutinous and rebellious intentions."

"At least 25 per cent of the present prison population continue to have this intention, knowing they won't face any significant form of punishment," the report states.

Alkenbrack said he got the report in the mail. It was unsigned and there was no covering letter.

Tips on Storage

In yesterday's column we discussed in a theoretical way the conditions required for the safe storage of home-grown vegetables for winter use. In passing, I must make it clear once again that the temperature and humidity values I mention are ideal conditions — something to shoot at. Vegetables can be kept in far from ideal environments, but their storage life is reduced correspondingly.

Today I propose to take up the specific conditions for the storage of a few of our more common vegetables.

Potatoes — This is one vegetable which mustn't be stored too cool. Most vegetables keep best at a temperature just barely above the freezing point, but spuds take on an unpleasant sweetish flavor if the temperature is allowed to drop below 36 degrees. Storage life will be longest in a range of 38 to 40 degrees they will start sprouting if kept too warm.

Also, potatoes must be stored in darkness, for light will turn the skins green, and these green skins are mildly poisonous. Greened potatoes may be eaten without danger if peeled deeply enough to remove all the green.

Store in slatted bins so air can circulate freely through the slats to the lower layers. If you use potato sacks instead of bins, don't heap the sacks on top of one another, but space them out a bit so air can circulate freely around and between them.

Carrots — Store carrots in boxes or cartons of peat moss, sand or sawdust, very slightly moistened. Arrange the carrots in layers, head to tail to take up less space ,close together but not quite touching. Ideal temperature is 32 degrees ,but the peat or sand allows quite a bit of latitude in this respect.

Cut the tops off short before storing, but do not, as sometimes advised, cut a slice from the top of the carrot.

★ ★ ★

Beets — Beets will bleed like a stuck pig if the tops are cut off close, as for carrots. Cut off about an inch above the bulb, or better still, twist off the tops between the two hands, as English and Scottish gardeners do. Store as for carrots in slightly dampened peat moss, sand or sawdust, and as close to the freezing point as you can manage.

★ ★ ★

Onions — Onions can take quite a bit more warmth than carrots or beets, but require much more air. For this reason they are never plunged in peat or sand, as for carrots and beets, but are stored in open mesh onion sacks or in slatted trays. Another way is to rope them, Italian style, and hang them from the rafters in a cool, airy place.

Onions, like potatoes, keep better in the dark, for light encourages premature sprouting. Contact with moisture induces rotting and blue mould, and as basement floors are almost always slightly damp from condensation, onion sacks should be raised up off the floor.

Pumpkins and squash — If these are allowed to complete their growth and ripen on the vine until their skins are hard, pumpkins can be stored for two months and winter squash for up to six months.

Wipe the hard skins with a cloth moistened in a weak household bleach to prevent mildew or patches of blue mould 1½ tablespoonfuls of Javex or Perfex per quart of water would be about right.

Pumpkins and winter squash — and the ornamental gourds — require a period of curing by placing them in a very warm but well ventilated room, 80 to 85 degrees, for a period of two weeks. This curing or after-ripening contributes considerably to their storage life. Then transfer to a cool, dry place, around 50 degrees, and they should be up off the floor on shelves or racks of some sort. Turn occasionally so all sides are exposed equally to the air.

Old Nixon Locked Up

WASHINGTON — It took the president's White House staff all day to locate the Old Nixon. They finally found him at Howard Johnson's across the street from the Watergate eating a meat loaf sandwich.

★ ★ ★

When the Old Nixon walked into the president's office, he found the New Nixon in a rage.

"I've just received information that you're behind the Dirty Tricks Department of the Committee to Re-elect the President. What do you have to say for yourself?"

"I refuse to comment as I don't want to prejudice the rights of the defendants in the Watergate bugging trial."

★ ★ ★

"Don't hand me that stuff," the president said. "You've put me in a helluva spot! How could you do it to me?"

"Ah, come on. You're overreacting. We were just having a little fun with the Democrats. No one takes it seriously," the Old Nixon said.

★ ★ ★

"But we didn't need it," the New Nixon said. "We're ahead by 28 points in the polls. It makes us look cheap and unscrupulous."

The Old Nixon retorted, "Sure, you can say that now. But at the time we started the intelligence operation no one knew what was going to happen. Suppose it had been real close? Our Dirty Tricks Department could have made the difference. You've been president so long you don't understand politics anymore."

"And you've been out of it so long," the New Nixon said, "you don't understand I am more interested in my place in history than I am in some rotten espionage operation against the other political party. I'm being clobbered in the press by all this publicity.

"Will you stop worrying about your place in history? We took a survey, and it showed that the public couldn't care less about the Watergate and the other things that have come out concerning our operation. The attitude is 'everyone does it during an election year.'" New Nixon said sarcastically.

★ ★ ★

"That's just swell," the "But do you know how many man-hours the justice department, the FBI and the White House have spent on this problem? I've had to promise a complete and open investigation of every facet of the case."

"And you've done a good job on it, Dickey boy," the Old Nixon chortled. "They won't be able to lay a finger on us before election day."

★ ★ ★

"Don't be so smug," the New Nixon said. "You've made a mess of things, and I'm giving you an order to stay out of the offices of the Committee to Re-elect the President. I don't want anyone in the White House to have anything to do with my campaign."

"You can't do that to me," the Old Nixon protested. "The Dirty Tricks Department was my baby. It was the only fun I've had in four years. What am I going to do now."

"You're to stay in your room until election day," the New Nixon said firmly.

"Suppose I don't? Suppose I spill everything to the Washington Post?" the Old Nixon asked.

"Don't threaten me, Tricky," the New Nixon said. If you do anything to further embarrass me or endanger my re-election, I will turn over to Kleindienst everything I know about your involvement with the Howard Hughes loan. Do I make myself perfectly clear?"

The Old Nixon, looking downcast and defeated, said, "Yes, sir, Mr. President."

Ford A Humbler

JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD — Very few people know it but Lord Killanin, the new president of the International Olympic committee, once was a Hollywood producer. I remember once meeting him at Warner Bros. in the '50s when he was producer for a trilogy of Irish stories which John Ford directed for the studio. Naturally, Killanin is an Irishman. He is expected to be a lot less autocratic than Avery Brundage despite the fact that he once was a producer. When you produce for Jack Ford, you soon learn the meaning of humility. Even John Wayne is humble around Ford. If memory serves, the trilogy was called The Rising of the Moon and narration was done by Tyrone Power. Very Irish.

★ ★ ★

When Steve McQueen had a touch of the flu during the making of Getaway, the crew voted 70 to 69 for him to get well.

★ ★ ★

Many a Hollywood star has discovered Maudsley Hospital in London. They prescribe a sort of he-man pill that has produced astounding results with the opposite sex. Apparently it's no quack pill because it has been written up in the Journal of the British Medical Association. Ryan O'Neal is looking for a pill that slows one down.

★ ★ ★

Larry Harvey will show you his operation upon request. He says the only person he won't show it to is Elizabeth Taylor who has had more than he. "I can't stand being topped," says Larry, "even with an appendix." But there was one consolation in the operation. The doctor told Larry that his liver is in perfect condition. Larry averages about two cases a week. And that's a lot of white wine.

★ ★ ★

If you wonder what ever happened to Robert Alda, the original Sky Masterson of Guys and Dolls and the movies' George Gershwin, he's now operating a restaurant in Rome called Il Den.

★ ★ ★

Jenny Hill, the 19-year-old daughter of Arthur Hill of Owen Marshall, Counsellor-at-law, is currently making her acting debut opposite her father in the segment now shooting at Universal. The role is that of a fatherless girl. Arthur firmly believes that nepotism should begin at home.

Mind Needs Exercise

Apropos of a recent piece of mine, about the "shape" of the mind being more important than its size, a reader wants to know how we can go about improving the "shapeliness" of the mind.

Without repeating what I said before, let me simply observe that the body and the mind have some characteristics in common that we rarely think of.

First, it is not the total bulk, or size, of the body that makes it either agile or responsive, but its muscle-tone, which depends largely on the right exercise.

The finest athletes are not the strongest — not even necessarily the boxers, where strength is a paramount quality — but those who can get the maximum result with the least expenditure of energy. And to do this, of course, you have to be "in shape."

Now, being in shape is as necessary for the mind as for the body. And we change the shape in much the same way: by exercising the mind, by improving its tone, by the stimulation of testing it against challenging objects, just as the trained athlete constantly does.

Everyone knows that living in an unchallenging environment — that is, where everyone has the same ideas and interests — causes the mind to shrivel up and sink into a comatose condition.

Without external challenge — or internal motivation — we begin to slump mentally as we slump physically; to stroke the same comfortable ideas, to utter the same familiar platitudes, to adopt the same unthinking postures of everyone around us.

Vital young people tend to leave small towns, or homogenous communities, precisely because of this intellectual conformity and rigid resistance to change.

This is not to say that the mind is necessarily shaped only "in opposition." Opposition for its own sake is neurotic and self-defeating.

But it is to say that shaping the mind begins with questioning, with ironic humor, with dissatisfaction at easy answers, and with the unwillingness to accept all the customary truisms that people erect as a defence against fresh thinking.

(Incidentally, these defences are one reason such people bore themselves and each other to death, and so constantly have to be seeking new sensory pleasures, new things to do, new places to go, as substitutes for an interesting landscape of the mind.)

★ ★ ★

For the mind, no less than the body, needs activity, variety, a change of pace and outlook, its own kind of "isometric" exercise, where it pushes against itself to gain shape and tone.

It is the best, and really only, insurance against the withering winds of old age.

All in the Family is again the most popular program on television after falling to sixth place in the first week of the new U.S. season.

Latest ratings show the second episode gained 56 per cent of the audience to win the week easily. The movie Valley of the Dolls was second with 50 per cent and the rest of the top 10 were, in order, Bridget Loves Bernie, Hawaii 5-O, Flip Wilson, Maude, Marcus Welby, an NBC movie, Sanford and Son and Gunsmoke.

CBS finished a poor third the first week but won the second handily. Programs that fell sharply in the second week included Paul Lynde, Julie Andrews, Bonanza, Doris Day and Owen Marshall. And speaking of ratings, Johnny Carson's 10th anniversary show got 30 per cent of the audience — twice its usual figure.

Lawyers for the Native Council of Canada and the Union of Ontario Indians say in Toronto they will try to have the CBC charged for communicating hate propaganda by showing part two of the movie Savage Sam on Disney World last Sunday. The movie speaks of "red devils" but the CBC went ahead because it is a work of fiction. It was shown on CBC in 1967 but Indians are especially unhappy in that the Disney audience is mainly young.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN
World Champions

Today's hands were played in the semi-final match of the World Bridge Olympics between Canada and The Aces.

Match your slam decisions with those made at the table. Use care since plenty of points hang in the balance.

♠ Q J 10 9 7 4 2
♦ K 4
♣ K Q 7 6

Do you move toward slam or do you pass after this bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	?

Answer: The slam bidders win and the passers lose — North has the right cards for slam. The entire hand:

NORTH
♠ A K 8
♥ J 10 7
♦ A Q 10 8 7

WEST
♥ K 9 8 4 3
♦ J 9 5 2

EAST
♠ 6 5 3
♥ A Q 6 5 2
♦ 6 3

SOUTH
♠ Q J 10 9 7 4 2
♦ K 4
♣ K Q 7 6

In the match Canada's Eric Murray and Sammy Kehela could not unravel the perfect fit and stopped at five spades. South (Murray) cue-bid five hearts over four spades but North (Kehela) merely returned to five spades, since he had a minimum and lacked a club control.

When bid by Aces Bob Goldman and Mike Lawrence, Goldman (South) used a Jacoby Transfer bid of two hearts (artificial showing spades). The Canadian West doubled to show the suit and East later bid the suit in competition. This made things easier since South was alerted to the fact that North's opening notrump bid was probably lacking heart honors. A slam swing and 11 international match points (IMPs) to The Aces.

Question No. 2: You are South, vulnerable, and hold:

♠ Q J 10 7 3
♥ A K Q 10 9 2
♦ J 5

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
5 ♦	Pass	5 ♥	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	?

Answer: Six spades is a cinch, the grand slam depends on whether you finesse or play for the drop in spades. North shows up with five spades to the ace. If you chose the grand slam decide your play before reading on. The entire hand:

NORTH
♠ A 9 8 6 4
♦ A K Q 8 4 3
♣ Q 9

WEST
♠ 5 2
♥ 8 7
♦ 10 9 8 2
♣ J 10 7 5 3

EAST
♠ K
♥ J 6 5 4 3
♦ 7
♣ A K 8 6 4 2

SOUTH
♠ Q J 10 7 3
♥ A K Q 10 9 2
♦ J 5

In the match Aces Bob Hamman and Paul Soloway played a very peaceful small slam and made it, losing to the singleton king. The Canadians pushed on to the grand slam and declarer, playing with the odds, took the finesse and went down one. A whopping 1,560-point swing good for 17 IMPs. All on the guess of a king!

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad, with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc. for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public every day.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of readership, but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient ad-visor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. for you daily. Monday through Saturday call.

Indians

PORT ALBERNI — Suggestions and demands to the provincial government will not be channelled through MLA Frank Calder (NDP-Atlin) by Indian bands on the west coast of Vancouver island, the West Coast District Council said Tuesday.

The 11-band council, which met Friday and Saturday in Port Alberni, said in a statement it does not approve of Premier Dave Barrett's choice of Calder to look into Indian problems.

So, the council said it will relay communications to the government through MLA Bob Skelly (NDP-Port Alberni) "whom we place the utmost confidence in" or the Union of B.C. Chiefs.

PORT ALBERNI — Suggestions and demands to the provincial government will not be channelled through MLA Frank Calder (NDP-Atlin) by Indian bands on the west coast of Vancouver island, the West Coast District Council said Tuesday.

The 11-band council, which met Friday and Saturday in Port Alberni, said in a statement it does not approve of Premier Dave Barrett's choice of Calder to look into Indian problems.

So, the council said it will relay communications to the government through MLA Bob Skelly (NDP-Port Alberni) "whom we place the utmost confidence in" or the Union of B.C. Chiefs.

The West Coast District Council gave three reasons for their objection to Calder's appointment to look after Indian problems:

● Calder endorsed the federal government's 1969 White Paper policy concerning Indians.

● Calder attempted to hinder presentation of the Lands Claims paper to the federal government by the UBCC.

● Council members also feel that Calder is mainly interested in the Nishga people and their aboriginal claim to the Nass Valley which is pending before the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Council members felt that Premier Barrett's action was contrary to his previous statement that he would consult with the Indian people before making decisions that affect their lives, the statement said.

"We ask Premier Barrett to recognize our final decision since it is in context with the idea of democracy."

● Expressed astonishment that Indians are not being consulted on boundaries of Phase 3 of the Pacific Rim National Park.

● Endorsed the First Citizens' Fund but agreed the provincial government should consult with Indian representatives how monies from the fund could best serve the Indians.

Study May Help Humans

Whale Has Rare Disease

Preventive medicine for a whale?

That will be the program for Sealand's female white killer whale, Chimo, Sealand president Bob Wright said Tuesday, after it had been confirmed that Chimo was suffering from a rare hereditary disease called the Chediak-Higashi syndrome.

She is the first whale in the world known to have the syndrome, and whales are only the fifth species known to suffer from it. The others are humans, mice, mink and cattle.

Treatment for the syndrome will consist of preventing Chimo, as much as possible, from acquiring any infection, Wright said.

Three main parts of the preventive program will be hygienic food preparation to minimize the chance of infection from food; high doses of vitamins to keep her in good shape and keep her resistance up and a good antibiotics program to give her immediate help in fighting off any infection she does pick up.

Sealand will also make sure Chimo does not exhaust herself by overwork, Wright said. He and some of his staff members are flying to Holland on Saturday to visit a dolphin aquarium there to learn more about preventive medicine for marine animals.

Scientists studying the Chediak-Higashi syndrome hope that what they learn from Chimo may have application in improving the outlook for humans who suffer from the disease, few of whom now live to be older than 14.

Wright said it is possible that Alice, a white killer whale seen off the B.C. coast for more than 20 years, also suffered from the disease.

In the meantime, Chimo, who is now between 5 and 6 years old, is "very happy" and seems completely healthy, he said.

Regiments To Stay, Says Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department said Tuesday there are no plans to abolish traditional regimental names, badges and headgear in the Canadian Armed Forces in favor of uniform military designations and dress.

A department spokesman was responding to a letter circulated by the Governor-General's Horse Guards, an armed forces reserve regiment, charging that "military authorities in Ottawa" planned to abolish distinguishing titles and dress "in a short number of months."

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has completed a study of future Canada-United States relations with the conclusion that this country should increase its independence while maintaining harmonious relations with its neighbor.

In a 24-page booklet, Canada-U.S. relations: Options for the Future, Sharp is in favor of a comprehensive long-term strategy to strengthen the Canadian economy "and other aspects of national life" and reduce the present vulnerability from outside influences.

"If the outcome is a Canada more confident in its identity, stronger in its capacity to satisfy the aspirations of Canadians and better equipped to play its part in the world, it is an outcome that is bound to make Canada a better neighbor and partner of the United States.

Sharp Strategy: Harmony With Strength

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp has completed a study of future Canada-United States relations with the conclusion that this country should increase its independence while maintaining harmonious relations with its neighbor.

In a 24-page booklet, Canada-U.S. relations: Options for the Future, Sharp is in favor of a comprehensive long-term strategy to strengthen the Canadian economy "and other aspects of national life" and reduce the present vulnerability from outside influences.

"If the outcome is a Canada more confident in its identity, stronger in its capacity to satisfy the aspirations of Canadians and better equipped to play its part in the world, it is an outcome that is bound to make Canada a better neighbor and partner of the United States.

In considering future Canadian-U.S. relations, Sharp looked at two other options—that Canada try to maintain the present relationship with a minimum of policy adjustments, or that Canada move toward closer integration with the U.S.

In a lengthy look at the first option, he said maintaining the existing relationships could result in increased Canadian dependency on the U.S., along with painful economic adjustments to offset changes in American policy.

The other option, closer integration, would not only result in greater Canadian dependence on the U.S., but it might not be acceptable to Canadian public opinion.

Breach of Contract – Baskin

Baskin

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

Pen Baskin, one of three B.C. mediation commissioners destined to lose their jobs, bitterly attacked the new NDP government Tuesday night for what he terms an outright breach of contract.

And John Parker, chairman of the commission, questioned the attitude of Premier Barrett who, he said, treated the matter lightly during a television interview.

He said that Baskin and third commissioner Allister Pollock, like himself, were not appointed for political reasons and had left important jobs to sit on the commission. He said Barrett had shrugged off their fate with a remark that they had been well paid.

"You just don't say: 'Well, get lost,'" Parker said.

The main feature of the new government's proposed amendments to the act is the decision that the chairman and commissioners be "removed" and the commission dissolved.

Since it was created by the Social Credit regime of W. A. C. Bennett in 1968, the commission and its compulsory powers have been under constant attack from organized labor.

Unions have generally boycotted it and on more than one occasion the act that created it has been blamed for serious confrontations between labor and government.

The NDP had said prior to its Aug. 30 election that it would repeal the compulsory features of the act, but the

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The first session of the 30th B.C. Legislative Assembly opened Tuesday amid criticism that the NDP government lacks imagination and is contributing to inflation while failing to meet the challenge to create new jobs throughout the province.

Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, following the reading of the speech from the throne by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson setting out the government's legislative program for the fall special session, told reporters the NDP wasn't proposing to do enough for the aged and handicapped and had failed completely to come up with new measures designed to create employment.

Bennett said the bill to establish a $200 monthly minimum income for everyone over 65 "should have been $225" as proposed last June in the Kelowna charter put forward by his Social Credit administration.

The former premier also claimed an industrial development corporation, similar to the one which he had planned to set up with $50 million in government surplus funds, was needed immediately to fight unemployment this winter.

"Unemployment is very bad in our province," Bennett said, "and it will grow worse each month under the NDP policy of no growth, which will mean less jobs.

"Since the NDP came to power this government has done nothing but (put) the heavy hand of state socialism over the whole economy. It has reduced the value of everybody's shares.

Remember not only the rich but ordinary people own shares and these values have been reduced by tens of millions of dollars already. The NDP policies will reduce jobs by the hundreds and the thousands.

"I prophesy the labor leaders will soon see what they bought in the election. The labor leaders in this province

Take the opening of the 30th B.C. Legislature in a special sitting Tuesday afternoon as an example.

Not quiet the way it was done in the old days. It's hard to catch the significance of tradition and its meaning to culture while watching the rear end of a cameraman scurrying into view.

Things began warmly under the hot house lights set up for live TV coverage as Premier Barrett walked over to Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett and clasped his hand.

It was the first meeting of the two leaders since their roles were reversed in the Aug. 30 election and both appeared happy with small talk probably inspired by TV cameras and a packed public gallery.

Trudeau on Canadian Control:

Too Soon To Get Tough

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday conditions may be ripe in about five years for tougher government measures to exert Canadian control over the economy.

He said in a question-and-answer session following a Junior Board of Trade luncheon that this is a difficult time for Canada to be "hard" on foreign investment because of the necessity to create jobs.

In the evening, Trudeau told upward of 15,000 cheering supporters at Maple Leaf Gardens that the goal of his government is a harmonious equilibrium embracing all regions of Canada.

He also pledged to work for a "social order reflecting human values" if the Liberals are returned to power in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Observing that Canada has a technical frontier, a geographic frontier and a social frontier, the prime minister declared: "We have in 1972 a chance to bring it all together."

At the $7.50-a-plate luncheon, Trudeau told a questioner that at another point in time, the government might find it easier to practise economic nationalism. It might even decide to slow down the rate of foreign-financed mineral exploitation advocated by former Liberal cabinet minister Eric Kierans.

This point may be reached in about five years, Trudeau said — after the job-creation problems caused by the post-war baby boom have been solved.

The government introduced a bill in the last Parliament to screen foreign takeovers of larger Canadian corporations.

The legislatiin died when Parliament was dissolved.

Among the entertainment groups helping to set the stage for the prime minister's 20-minute speech was The Crowbar, a rock ensemble said to be a favoriee of his wife, Margaret.

Price of Drugs 'Mind-Blowing'

"Canadian drug prices are completely unrelated to reality.

"Instead, the firms charge whatever they think they can get away with," he told an NDP rally of about 1,700.

It was the first event of a week-long Lewis tour through Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Lewis blamed the high drug prices partly on the firms' advertising expenses.

"For every dollar you spend on drugs, 30 cents of that dollar is spent on advertising and promotion."

He said the industry spends $5,000 a year for every Canadian doctor to convince physicians to prescribe their brands.

The difference between the bulk prices and the prices paid by consumers was "mind-blowing": from 1,100 per cent to almost 1,500 per cent.

Lewis prescribed a three-step cure for high drug prices:

- Set up a crown corporation to produce generic drugs and sell them at prices just high enough to pay for production and rearch.
- Set new consumer regu-

Signal Picked Up In Alaska Search

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A massive air search for House Majority Leader Hale Boggs and three other men missing in a light plane on a rain-swept flight from Anchorage centred Tuesday night in the Juneau area with hopes that some brief, emergency beacon signals might be coming from the aircraft's special equipment.

Darkness, however, forced most of the search planes to return to their bases for the night.

The signals from an emergency locator beacon like the kind that was installed in the Cessna plane for the flight from Anchorage were heard three times Tuesday afternoon by a helicopted sortie.

Pilots of two coast guard jet-powered helicopters said they picked up a signal for about 40 minutes beginning about 2 p.m. PDT, 10 miles west of Juneau.

Another signal lasting about 30 seconds was later picked up by the helicopters, pilots said, but was quickly lost.

Yellowstone Idea Went Out to World

What does an unspoiled area need to win the title national park — or even equivalent reserve? From one national park (Yellowstone) in one country (the U.S.) 100 years ago, the world now has 1,422 parks and equivalent reserves in 101 countries. The nature, and the implications, of this dramatic growth are outlined in an important environment series — commencing today on Page 5.

Troops in Ulster Battle Both Sides

BELFAST (AP) — The three-cornered violence dreaded by British authorities broke out Tuesday night in Belfast as soldiers fought Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists in separate gun battles. (See story, Page 3).

Army headquarters said soldiers fighting a "war on two fronts" claimed to have killed or wounded at least 10 gunmen. Twelve policemen and troopers were wounded, according to the army.

Police said two persons, a man and a woman, were shot dead in the fighting that raged simultaneously in major Protestant and Catholic enclaves.

The confirmed dead took Northern Ireland's three-year death toll to at least 613. Ten persons have died in the last five days.

The British troops, one military source said, were "the meat in the sandwich," fighting guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army on one side and guerrillas of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association on the other.

Most of the previous shootings had been between British troops and the IRA.

Witness Collapses At Murder Trial

NANAIMO — A 21-year-old girl Tuesday told a Supreme Court jury here of the events surrounding the shooting April 22 of her girl friend, Brenda Eileen Daniluck, 16, in a local night club.

Miss Sweezey said that she, Miss Daniluck and McCormick first got together on the evening of April 21 in a Nanaimo beer parlor. From there, the trio went to the Eagles' club, also in downtown Nanaimo.

While there, the witness said, McCormick started giving Miss Daniluck a "rough time, telling her to grow up."

Proceedings were interrupted when the witness broke down crying and shouted, as she looked at the accused," I just want him out of my sight. I want him out of my sight. I'm sick. I'm fed up."

She then testified that the trip, with another man who had joined them at the Eagles' Club, went to the Longhouse Restaurant at about 10.

A short time after their arrival, she said, a man asked Brenda Daniluck to dance.

She said McCormick began acting strangely and became possessive of Miss Daniluck, saying "nobody dances with my girl."

Later in the evening, Miss Sweezey said she became frightened when McCormick said "he was my godfather and that he was going to hurt me. I was frightened and I suggested we leave but we stayed," she said.

Court was told that when he returned, he just said "hi" to his former companions but sat with another couple.

"Then suddenly Mike pulled a gun. He had it just above the table, pointing at me. I remember falling over. The next I heard was two shots and I sat straight up. Brenda was white."

He walked casually away — like nothing had happened. I ran to Brenda and then I heard another shot. Mike continued out the door," she said.

She said she did not remember being shot until the next morning in hospital. She said she was grazed by a bullet across the forehead.

Miss Sweezey said she had known McCormick for about nine months and had seen him under the influence of excessive alcohal consumption at least once.

The questioning was pressed by crown counsel David Williams and the witness replied:

Police later said that in addition to the two girls, Wayne Barber and Rick Coultran, both of Nanaimo, had also been hit by bullets. Barber was shot while in the restaurant and Coultran was hit while in the parking lot outside the establishment.

A chrome-finished .22-calibre revolver has been admitted as an exhibit in the trial, which is expected to take all week to complete.

Nanaimo hospital pathologist Dr. Stanley Grant testified that in his opinion, the Daniluck girl had died of two bullet rounds to the head.

'The Evidence . . . Is Overwhelming'—Drake

Free School Closure Sticks

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

"It's like a black spot has been put on earth here . . . I don't know what we'll do now or what they'll do to us."

"Here" is the site of the former Saturna Island Free School, at Boot Cove on Saturna Island, and the words came from William Sheffeld, former director of the school who had learned late Tuesday that its appeal against a Greater Victoria health board closure order had been dismissed in Victoria County Court.

In a written judgment handed down earlier in the day Judge M. L. T. Drake said that in his view, "the evidence . . . is overwhelming in justifying the making of the order."

He also rejected three arguments of the school's lawyers that the order had been legally bad.

The order in question had been given to the school Aug. 16, 1971 and had ordered that the premises be vacated by the end of that month.

The school which opened in 1968 housed up to 24 children from seven to 17, and operated in an unstructured manner with no formal curriculum or rules for the students. Fees were between $1,000 and $1,250 a year.

The premises involved were an 80-year-old farmhouse which was the main building of the school and several outbuildings attached to it, and the grounds given for the order were various unsanitary conditions there.

Sheffeld said that as a result of the order, the school itself had not re-opened for the 1971-72 or 1972-73 terms, but, since the appeal was pending, the premises had not been completely vacated.

He and his family and the families of other former school staff members had continued to live, with some farm animals, on the 30-acre farm site, and "we will try to do whatever we can to keep on living here ourselves."

If an appeal was possible from Drake's decision, it would probably be taken, he said, but before making a firm decision on this, he would have to consult with his lawyer, William Sigurgeirson of Vancouver.

The staff had hoped to reopen the school, "but it looks a bit bleak now," he said.

It was not clear what would happen next in the proceedings. Sheffeld said he did not know if they would now have to vacate the premises completely, what would have to happen in terms of standards to allow them to be inhabited again, how much time they would have before vacating, or how any eviction would be carried out.

Neither was he sure what would happen if the property was sold if someone else wanted to live in it.

In the judgment, Drake wrote that it appeared that until late 1969, after the school had survived another closure order by the health board, "the requirements of the health officers as to sanitary arrangements brought about considerable efforts" at the school.

Cowichan Longhouse Lost

Oldest longhouse on Cowichan Indian reserve burned to ground in minutes Monday afternoon. Fire Chief Peter Henry whose 18 volunteers from North Cowichan's Southend Fire Department fought blaze in vain, said it was probably started by children playing with matches or cigarettes. Structure was still used for dancing and Indian games.

Indians Disapprove Indian MLA's Role

PORT ALBERNI — Suggestions and demands to the provincial government will not be channelled through MLA Frank Calder (NDP-Atlin) by Indian bands on the west coast of Vancouver island, the West Coast District Council said Tuesday.

The 11-band council, which met Friday and Saturday in Port Alberni, said in a statement it does not approve of Premier Dave Barrett's choice of Calder to look into Indian problems.

So, the council said it will relay communications to the government through MLA Bob Skelly (NDP-Port Alberni) "whom we place the utmost confidence in" or the Union of B.C. Chiefs.

Calder, who was appointed Minister without portfolio shortly after the Aug. 30 election, has been an MLA since 1949. He is president of the Nishga tribal council.

The West Coast District Council gave three reasons for their objection to Calder's appointment to look after Indian problems:

- Calder endorsed the federal government's 1969 White Paper policy concerning Indians.
- Calder attempted to hinder presentation of the Lands Claims paper to the federal government by the UBCC.
- Council members also feel that Calder is mainly interested in the Nishga people and their aboriginal claim to the Nass Valley which is pending before the Supreme Court of Canada.

"Council members felt that Premier Barrett's action was contrary to his previous statement that he would consult with the Indian people before making decisions that affect their lives, the statement said.

"We ask Premier Barrett to recognize our final decision since it is in context with the idea of democracy."

In other business, the council:

- Expressed astonishment that Indians are not being consulted on boundaries of Phase 3 of the Pacific Rim National Park.
- Endorsed the First Citizens' Fund but agreed the provincial government should consult with Indian representatives how monies from the fund could best serve the Indians.

Hospital Embraces Arthritis Program

NANAIMO— The Nanaimo Regional Hospital has entered into an agreement whereby an arthritis control program will be integrated into the hospital's rehabilitation program.

The function was carried out locally by the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society.

Under terms of the agreement, certain members of the staff of the CARS physiotherapy department will be joining the physiotherapy staff at the hospital. Hospital therapists will be oreinted through the CARS training programs so that a fully trained and integrated staff will be achieved.

The regional hospital will also extend therapy services to Ladysmith and Chemainus hospitals by using visiting physiotherapists from the hospital instead of from the CARS organization as is now the case.

The new service makes this kind of treatment available to residents of Nanaimo, Ladysmith, Chemainus, Parksville and Qualicum.

In a prepared statement Monday, the hospital board says "It is hoped that the continued interests of the community in the work of both CARS and the hospital in its regional arthritic program will be maintained."

The CARS auxilliary will become part of the hospital's volunteer services and will continue to work with arthritic patients both in and out of hospital as required.

Rink Seekers Begin Dig for Facts

DUNCAN — Cowichan area residents decided to take things into their own hands Tuesday night to try and have a skating rink built in the Duncan area.

At a meeting held in the Duncan Fire Hall, more than 80 people voted to form a fact-finding committee to study the feasibility of constructing a rink. Mayor Jim Quaife chaired the meeeting, stepping down when the committee, headed by Art Chamberlain, was formed.

"The work is up to you if you are concerned citizens," Quaife said.

Quaife, who said he was at the meeting not in his capacity as mayor of the city of Duncan, but as a concerned citizen, presented two alternatives to the meeting, alternatives which the fact-finding committee will be studying. One was to form an association and sell debentures, which he estimated would cost around $250 for the first year, and the other was to apply pressure on the municipal and regional councils to construct an area if the committee found an association would be unable to support one.

The need for an arena in the Duncan area has become more controversial since 600 youngsters living south of Chemainus and Crofton were turned away from the Fuller Lake arena due to crowding. Within the regional district there are now two arenas, one at Lake Cowichan and one at Fuller Lake. Both lose approximately $60,000 annually it was disclosed at the meeting, which is made up by local industry in the two areas.

"We know there is a need for a rink at this particular time in this particular area," said Quaife. He thought it would be possible to build one for a quarter of a million dollars.

Committee chairman Chamberlain said, "The committee is going to investigate whether or not it is possible, and whether we want to attempt it. It's a big project but it isn't impossible."

Leg Badly Cut

Police, Pair Save Driver

NANAIMO — Police here said Tuesday a city man narrowly escaped bleeding to death early Tuesday morning following a freak accident.

It was reported that Allen Coulter, of 5 Durham Place, was dumping a load of wood chips from a truck owned by the Dorman Pulp Chip Company when a brace on the box of the truck gave way.

Police said the man fell into the box and, in the process, severly lacerated his leg.

The man called several times for help before his call was heard by nearby residents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Henstock of 990 Haliburton St.

Henstock is said to have called police then run outside to help the man.

A police car, only two blocks away, rushed to the scene and with the help of Henstock, removed the man from the truck and made arrangements for him to be taken to Nanaimo hospital for emergency treatment.

Police said the couple and the two police officers, Cst. Terry Christianson and Cst. Dave Barrett, combined to save the man from possible death since the injury to the man's leg was said to be "bleeding profusely" when he was pulled from the truck.

World Pauses on Cowichan's Doorstep

DUNCAN — During the past summer people from all corners of the world came to spend sometime in the friendly Cowichan Valley.

Registrations in the Tourist Information Bureau, operated by the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce are ample proof that people from many lands stopped in the hub of the Cowichan Valley.

Chamber secretary Tom Oldfield noted in his annual report that more than 5,000 visitors called at the tourist bureau. They came from: various parts of Canada and the States, Africa, Australia, Argentine, Barbados, Belgium, East Siberia, England, France, Germany, Scotland, Hawaii, Holland, Northern Ireland, Japan, Sweden, Switzerland and Wales.

Oldfield said "the enquiries were mostly on nearby camping grounds as it is obvious that there is a high increase of campers on the road. There were also many questions on ferry schedules, motels and tourist attractions on the whole of the island." There were also question from people who wanted to settle.

Quadra Loggers' Hijinx Keeps 'Em Down at the Inn

By LON WOOD
Colonist Island Editor

HERIOT BAY — "Waiter! There's a deer in my beer!"

Well, it didn't happen exactly like that, but last fall when Norton Dainard was called to check trouble in the Heriot Bay Inn pub, that's what he saw.

"I was sitting in the lobby hiding from the guests," he said. "Someone came in and said 'You'd better go into the beer parlor — they need some help.' "

Dainard, who with his wife Carole owns the hotel, said he ran into the barroom expecting to encounter a brawl, but instead was confronted by a full-grown deer, cradled around a glass of beer at a table.

"The loggers and hunters in the place roared, but were really disappointed when I said it couldn't stay," he said. "Someone took it (a gutted carcass) out to a car where it was later stolen."

Then there was the time when an Indian family brought their grandfather one hot July day to celebrate his 100th birthday at the Quadra Island hotel.

The old gent — blind, but otherwise in good health — told of how he once played in a dance band at the inn around the turn of the century.

"He drank 15 beers, and then discovered his family had gone fishing and left him," said Carole. "When we found them, they came into the pub and put him in the boat to sleep."

Since taking over the hotel nearly two years ago, the Dainards — both 29 — have been through many harrowing episodes, too.

"Eighty skippers from Nelson Brothers fisheries were due for a banquet," said Carole. "We thought they'd cancel because it was blowing and snowing — but they turned up. We checked our fire insurance and lit the candles."

They are rural dwellers by choice since Norton packed it in with Proctor and Gamble — the soap people — because although he was moving up, they both felt they would like to spend more time with their children Cam and Cindy — now nine and 10 respectivaly.

"We were on the verge of the proverbial transfer to Toronto, but we were fed up," said Norton.

The 15-room inn provides a social centre for most of the island's 2,000-odd inhabitants. Saturday night sing-songs and accordion solos by Rusty Beech drift out across the bay, and this Halloween as in years past, many people — young and old — will dress in costume and turn up at the hotel for an impromptu party.

Heriot Bay Inn on Quadra Island

Carole and Norton Dainard

"On father's day we get a bunch of dads up here — let loose to have a grand old time," said Carole, who also catered once to 130 old-age pensioners who stopped by one day for tea and crumpets during a bus tour.

The hotel itself was built prior to the First World War and is reminiscent of the days when mining and logging brought a boom leading to its construction. Now, with fishing still going strong — sport and commercial — it has a saltier air.

The business venture is not the first for the couple, who once operated a drive-in theatre in Langley.

"We got tired of having the screen outside our living room window and a speaker inside," said Carole.

"There was the time one yahoo stood in front of the projection lens, and the night the cows got onto the field," said Norton, but that's another story.

COURTENAY — The city of Courtenay objects to B.C. Telephone proposed long distance rate structure and bases its objections on the fact the proposal "appears calculated to further increase the already all-time profits of the telephone company even though the company itself calls it a break-even proposition."

The objection was sent by letter to C. W. Crump secretary of the telecommunications committee of the Canadian Transport Commission. It was the latest in a long battle between B.C. Tel and the city of Courtenay over costs and rates.

Administrator Derrick Ratcliffe told Crump the city contends that the phone company is "glossing over" the real issue of a general rate increase by concentrating the publics attention to the savings to be gained in making direct dialing calls.

Ratcliffe said that no information has been given to the general public as to why rates are going up, "no suggestion has been made by the telephone company that it costs 10 per cent to 28 per cent more to handle person to person calls now than it did before, and in fact the total emphasis of the company's proposal has been placed on the fact that it costs less to dial direct than it does person to person while it omits to state the major proportion of long distance revenue is derived from person to person and operator handled calls which are the ones most frequently used in the world of trade and commerce."

Ald. Gordon Wagner said the company action seems to be in reverse because the rates for the "less busy lines" are the ones which are going up.

Some weeks ago the phone company said it proposed to place Courtenay in a different class for rate purposes, basing the change on the fact that the number of lines in use had exceeded those covered in the former rate structure.

Council objected to this proposal on the grounds that many lines were extensions which did not require any additional operator time or effort.

Mayor Bill Moore remarked this week that nothing further has been heard on that topic nor has he heard of any public hearing on the topic.

Karen Sanford MLA for Comox in a pre-election speech commented on the B.C. Tel proposal.

"B.C. Tel's proposed rate increases for the Union Bay-Oyster Bay region graphically illustrate the need for a public takeover of this American-controlled monopoly," she said.

Tourist Bureau Short Cash

PARKSVILLE — The possibility of greatly extended or year-round operation of Parksville tourist bureau was discussed at the annual meeting of Parksville and District Chamber of Commerce and resulted in a resolution being approved to request government aid in financing. At the suggestion of Chamber president T. C. Tryon a resolution in regard to tourist bureau financing is to be sent to the forthcoming mini-convention of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island.

Tryon said it is impossible for a small municipality to finance a year-round tourist bureau yet inquiries were received for longer periods each year and the operation of the bureau was extended to the end of September this year because of continued use of the facilities. Parksville is seen as a hub information centre for all upper Island areas and as such it is felt that the entire cost of bureau operation should not fall on the community.

The discussion followed a report from Mrs. H. L. S. McCulloch who is tourist bureau custodian and also Chamber of Commerce secretary. Mrs. Culloch's report showed that use of the tourist bureau increased considerably over 1971. Approximately 21,196 visitors signed the register in 1971 compared to about 28,500 in 1972. This represents a very small percentage of the number of tourists visiting here as many do not register and it is difficult to judge the number per car. It was estimated that some 20,000 cars a day went through Parksville during the peak period.

Mrs. McCulloch reported that an increase in staff might be in order during July and August and expressed appreciation for the assistance of the fisheries department attendant who was on duty much of the time. Even after the end of September Mrs. McCulloch said she had received many inquiries at home as she had left her telephone number on the door of the tourist bureau and was surprised at the late tourist travel to this area. Quite a number of inquiries are received from prospective residents.

Another resolution to be sent to the ACCVI convention is a request for a late night ferry service between Horseshoe Bay and Departure Bay. This is a repeat of a former request and copies will be sent to government officials and Robert Skelly, MLA for this district.

Sacked Arbitrators Furious

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Labor Reporter

Pen Baskin, one of three B.C. mediation commissioners destined to lose their jobs, bitterly attacked the new NDP government Tuesday night for what he terms an outright breach of contract.

And John Parker, chairman of the commission, questioned the attitude of Premier Barrett who, he said, treated the matter lightly during a television interview.

He said that Baskin and third commissioner Allister Pollock, like himself, were not appointed for political reasons and had left important jobs to sit on the commission. He said Barrett had shrugged off their fate with a remark that they had been well paid.

"You just don't say: 'Well, get lost,' " Parker said.

The main feature of the new government's proposed amendments to the act is the decision that the chairman and commissioners be "removed" and the commission dissolved.

Since it was created by the Social Credit regime of W. A. C. Bennett in 1968, the commission and its compulsory powers have been under constant attack from organized labor.

Unions have generally boycotted it and on more than one occasion the act that created it has been blamed for serious confrontations between labor and government.

The NDP had said prior to its Aug. 30 election that it would repeal the compulsory features of the act, but the

Lack of Job Program Hit Skimpy –Bennett Shellout

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

The first session of the 30th B.C. Legislative Assembly opened Tuesday amid criticism that the NDP government lacks imagination and is contributing to inflation while failing to meet the challenge to create new jobs throughout the province.

Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett, following the reading of the speech from the throne by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson setting out the government's legislative program for the fall special session, told reporters the NDP wasn't proposing to do enough for the aged and handicapped and had failed completely to come up with new measures designed to create employment.

Bennett said the bill to establish a $200 monthly minimum income for everyone over 65 "should have been $225" as proposed last June in the Kelowna charter put forward by his Social Credit administration.

The former premier also claimed an industrial development corporation, similar to the one which he had planned to set up with $50 million in government surplus funds, was needed immediately to fight unemployment this winter.

"Unemployment is very bad in our province," Bennett said, "and it will grow worse each month under the NDP policy of no growth, which will mean less jobs.

"Since the NDP came to power this government has done nothing but (put) the heavy hand of state socialism over the whole economy. It has reduced the value of everybody's shares.

Remember not only the rich but ordinary people own shares and these values have been reduced by tens of millions of dollars already. The NDP policies will reduce jobs by the hundreds and the thousands.

"I prophesy the labor leaders will soon see what they bought in the election. The labor leaders in this province

Take the opening of the 30th B.C. Legislature in a special sitting Tuesday afternoon as an example.

In a booming voice one of the clerks of the House signals the arrival of Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson, a CBC television crew comes in backwards.

Not quite the way it was done in the old days. It's hard to catch the significance of tradition and its meaning to culture while watching the rear end of a cameraman scurrying into view.

Things began warmly under the hot house lights set up for live TV coverage as Premier Barrett walked over to Opposition leader W. A. C. Bennett and clasped his hand.

It was the first meeting of the two leaders since their roles were reversed in the Aug. 30 election and both appeared happy with small talk probably inspired by TV cameras and a packed public gallery.

Later the two men were back in their more common

Trudeau on Canadian Control:

Too Soon To Get Tough

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday conditions may be ripe in about five years for tougher government measures to exert Canadian control over the economy.

He said in a question-and-answer session following a Junior Board of Trade luncheon that this is a difficult time for Canada to be "hard" on foreign investment because of the necessity to create jobs.

In the evening, Trudeau told upward of 15,000 cheering supporters at Maple Leaf Gardens that the goal of his government is a harmonious equilibrium embracing all regions of Canada.

He also pledged to work for a "social order reflecting human values" if the Liberals are returned to power in the Oct. 30 federal election.

Observing that Canada has a technical frontier, a geographic frontier and a social frontier, the prime minister declared: "We have in 1972 a chance to bring it all together."

At the $7.50-a-plate luncheon, Trudeau told a questioner that at another point in time, the government might find it easier to practise economic nationalism. It might even decide to slow down the rate of foreign-financed mineral exploitation advocated by former Liberal cabinet minister Eric Kierans.

This point may be reached in about five years, Trudeau said — after the job-creation problems caused by the post-war baby boom have been solved.

The government introduced a bill in the last Parliament to screen foreign takeovers of larger Canadian corporations.

The legislation died when Parliament was dissolved.

Among the entertainment groups helping to set the stage for the prime minister's 20-minute speech was The Crowbar, a rock ensemble said to be a favorite of his wife, Margaret.

Lewis' New Target

Price of Drugs 'Mind-Blowing'

SASKATOON (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader David Lewis renewed his campaign against the "corporate rip-off" Tuesday, blasting the drug industry for mind-blowing prices.

"Canadian drug prices are completely unrelated to reality.

"Instead, the firms charge whatever they think they can get away with," he told an NDP rally of about 1,700.

It was the first event of a week-long Lewis tour through Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Lewis blamed the high drug prices partly on the firms' advertising expenses.

"For every dollar you spend on drugs, 30 cents of that dollar is spent on advertising and promotion."

He said the industry spends $5,000 a year for every Canadian doctor to convince physicians to prescribe their brands.

The difference between the bulk prices and the prices paid by consumers was "mind-blowing": from 1,100 per cent to almost 1,500 per cent.

Lewis prescribed a three-step cure for high drug prices:

- Set up a crown corporation to produce generic drugs and sell them at prices just high enough to pay for production and research.
- Set new consumer regu-

Signal Picked Up In Alaska Search

ANCHORAGE (AP) — A massive air search for House Majority Leader Hale Boggs and three other men missing in a light plane on a rain-swept flight from Anchorage centred Tuesday night in the Juneau area with hopes that some brief, emergency beacon signals might be coming from the aircraft's special equipment.

Darkness, however, forced most of the search planes to return to their bases for the night.

The signals from an emergency locator beacon like the kind that was installed in the Cessna plane for the flight from Anchorage were heard three times Tuesday afternoon by a helicopted sortie.

Pilots of two coast guard jet-powered helicopters said they picked up a signal for about 40 minutes beginning about 2 p.m. PDT, 10 miles west of Juneau.

Another signal lasting about 30 seconds was later picked up by the helicopters, pilots said, but was quickly lost.

Yellowstone Idea Went Out to World

What does an unspoiled area need to win the title national park — or even equivalent reserve? From one national park (Yellowstone) in one country (the U.S.) 100 years ago, the world now has 1,422 parks and equivalent reserves in 101 countries. The nature, and the implications, of this dramatic growth are outlined in an important environment series — commencing today on Page 5.

Troops in Ulster Battle Both Sides

BELFAST (AP) — The three-cornered violence dreaded by British authorities broke out Tuesday night in Belfast as soldiers fought Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists in separate gun battles. (See story, Page 3).

Army headquarters said soldiers fighting a "war on two fronts" claimed to have killed or wounded at least 10 gunmen. Twelve policemen and troopers were wounded, according to the army.

Police said two persons, a man and a woman, were shot dead in the fighting that raged simultaneously in major Protestant and Catholic enclaves.

The confirmed dead took Northern Ireland's three-year death toll to at least 613. Ten persons have died in the last five days.

The British troops, one military source said, were "the meat in the sandwich," fighting guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army on one side and guerrillas of the Protestant Ulster Defence Association on the other.

Most of the previous shootings had been between British troops and the IRA.

Liberty Didn't Last

Shortly before 4:30 p.m. Monday, 24-year-old Victoria resident Robert James McCrae was found guilty in Victoria Provincial Court of shoplifting a number of recordings and allowed to go free pending his sentence Nov. 1.

He went directly from the court building at 633 Fisgard to The Bay about a block away and, at about 4:40 p.m., he was stopped for shoplifting 35 more recordings.

In court Tuesday, McCrae pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of theft involving less than $200 and was sentenced by Judge William Ostler to four months in jail.

The trial Monday, before Judge F. S. Green, involved 12 recordings worth a total of $83.66 and taken Aug. 22 from Modern Sound Records, 766 Fort.

A security officer for The Bay testified that McCrae, put a large bundle of recordings under his coat at about 4:40 p.m. and added that McCrae "adopted a threatening attitude" when stopped in his car.

Macintyre said he had not opposed McCrae's release Monday because McCrae had a record of only one minor offence since 1967.

He said he regretted his decision, and "the contempt with which he (McCrae) treats the leniency given by this court is absolutely astounding."

Visas S For UV

If the Chinese government agrees to grant visas, a party of 15 students and faculty members from the University of Victoria will spend a month next summer touring China.

The tour is being sponsored jointly by UVic geography department and the Pacific Studies program.

Idea of the tour was developed by professors Bryan Farrell and Hong Kong-born David Cheun-Yan Lai. Last year Lai was invited to spend the summer touring China at the request of the Chinese government. He is a specialist in the industrial geography of China.

Farrell said Tuesday that the Chinese embassy in Ottawa "has been most helpful all along, but there has been plenty of paper work."

Detailed forms must be completed by each visa applicant about national status, whether there are any relatives living in China and if so, their names and addresses.

Farrell said there had been a few minor complications because some of the people interested in the tour had Canadian passports and some had U.S. passports.

City Wants CP Land On Harbor

Marathon Realty, the firm which two years ago appeared to be putting the finishing touches on plans for a $1.5 million Inner Harbor development, now is negotiating with the city of Victoria for the sale of the waterfront property.

Doug Aitken, assistant general manager of Marathon's Vancouver office, will meet this morning with Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen to discuss the matter.

Until about two years ago, Marathon Realty, a Canadian Pacific subsidiary, had plans for a major development on the property between Belleville and the waterfront.

At one time, plans included a highrise tower with revolving restaurant on top. These plans were later scaled down.

After several different proposals, the company finally planned to build a number of boutiques, a small shopping centre, a seafood restaurant and a dance pavilion on the 6½ acre site.

But that proposal, too, ran into opposition from city hall. Mayor Peter Pollen, then an alderman, referred to the project as a tourist trap.

The company then announced it wouldn't proceed with its plans "for the time being."

Aiken said in an interview from Vancouver Tuesday that the firm hadn't completely ruled out the possibility of a development, but it appeared that the city would like to purchase the property.

He said he would enter the negotiations with an open mind. All possibilities would be discussed.

Pollen said the "uncertainty over the piece of property is closer to being resolved" than that of any other in the city.

The city would like to purchase the site to assure that this part of the Inner Harbor will remain for pedestrian use only, but the mayor has said previously that the price must be right before the city will buy.

Acquire Parks, Block Bad Projects

Victoria Moves Toward Land Bank

Victoria has taken the first step toward establishing a land bank.

Purpose of the proposed land bank is to acquire choice pieces of property for the city's parks system, and to prevent commercial development in places where it would be detrimental to the public interest.

A complete report on the proposal is being prepared by

The plan was proposed Tuesday to city council's planning committee by Ald. Mike Young, committee chairman.

For a while, the proposal appeared doomed, especially when Mayor Peter Pollen pointed out that unwanted development couldn't possibly be prevented through the mass purchase of property.

The mayor told the committee the city didn't have enough money to buy out every developer whose projects didn't suit the city.

But Young insisted that his land bank proposal be put to a vote. He told the mayor nothing would make him abandon his plan.

Pollen then suggested that it would be far more effective if, for instance, the entire James Bay area were rezoned to R-1 residential. That would freeze development and give the city time to prepare a comprehensive development plan for James Bay.

Pollen had referred specifically to James Bay after Young brought to the committee's attention the plans for a large three-storey frame apartment building at Dallas and Dock. That development, Young said, was not in the public interest, but there was nothing council could do to stop it.

He said the site on which the apartment would be built was an example of the kind of property the city could purchase with land bank funds.

"But that takes the kind of guts you don't find around here," the mayor added.

Young then said he didn't care what the mayor wanted to talk about. "I want to discuss the land bank."

Pollen dropped the subject of wholesale rezoning of James Bay and the committee voted in favor of requesting the report on the details of establishing a land bank.

One area in which funds from a land bank could be used, according to City Engineer James Garnett, was the purchase of land needed for civic projects, such as road construction.

He told the committee that in many cases, the city was forced to buy land for such purposes only when it was ready to proceed with construction.

Visas Still Problem For UVic China Tour

If the Chinese government agrees to grant visas, a party of 15 students and faculty members from the University of Victoria will spend a month next summer touring China.

The tour is being sponsored jointly by UVic geography department and the Pacific Studies program.

Idea of the tour was developed by professors Bryan Farrell and Hong Kong-born David Cheun-Yan Lai. Last year Lai was invited to spend the summer touring China at the request of the Chinese government. He is a specialist in the industrial geography of China.

Farrell said Tuesday that the Chinese embassy in Ottawa "has been most helpful all along, but there has been plenty of paper work."

Detailed forms must be completed by each visa applicant about national status, whether there are any relatives living in China and if so, their names and addresses.

Farrell said there had been a few minor complications because some of the people interested in the tour had Canadian passports and some had U.S. passports.

A number of Canadian-born Chinese students have applied to make the trip, but Farrell and Lai won't know exactly how many people are interested until applications close at the end of the month.

Total cost of the month-long trip, including all transportation, meals and accommodation, is expected to be under $1,300 each. Farrell said he would welcome any members of the community who wanted to make the tour.

Although the tour is planned for next summer, early application is necessary as all correspondence is conducted in Chinese and the applications are vetted by both the Chinese embassy in Ottawa and the Chinese government.

The party will fly to Hong Kong and spend time there before travelling by train to Canton. Tentative plans call for visits to a number of major Chinese industrial centres and also to the capital Peking.

On the return journey the party will spend a few extra days in Hong Kong before flying home.

Free School Loses Appeal of Closure

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

"It's like a black spot has been put on earth here ... I don't know what we'll do now or what they'll do to us."

"Here" is the site of the former Saturna Island Free School, at Boot Cove on Saturna Island, and the words came from William Sheffeld, former director of the school who had learned late Tuesday that its appeal against a Greater Victoria health board closure order had been dismissed in Victoria County Court.

In a written judgment handed down earlier in the day Judge M. L. T. Drake said that in his view, "the evidence ... is overwhelming in justifying the making of the order."

He also rejected three arguments of the school's lawyers that the order had been legally bad.

The order in question had been given to the school Aug. 16, 1971 and had ordered that the premises be vacated by the end of that month.

The school which opened in 1968 housed up to 24 children from seven to 17, and operated in an unstructured manner with no formal curriculum or rules for the students. Fees were between $1,000 and $1,250 a year.

The premises involved were an 80-year-old farmhouse which was the main building of the school and several outbuildings attached to it, and the grounds given for the order were various unsanitary conditions there.

Sheffeld said that as a result of the order, the school itself had not re-opened for the 1971-72 or 1972-73 terms, but, since the appeal was pending, the premises had not been completely vacated.

He and his family and the families of other former school staff members had continued to live, with some farm animals, on the 30-acre farm site, and "we will try to do whatever we can to keep on living here ourselves."

If an appeal was possible from Drake's decision, it would probably be taken, he said, but before making a firm decision on this, he would have to consult with his lawyer, William Sigurgeirson of Vancouver.

The staff had hoped to reopen the school, "but it looks a bit bleak now," he said.

It was not clear what would happen next in the proceedings. Sheffeld said he did not know if they would now have to vacate the premises completely, what would have to happen in terms of standards to allow them to be inhabited again, how much time they would have before vacating, or how any eviction would be carried out.

Neither was he sure what would happen if the property was sold if someone else wanted to live in it.

In the judgment, Drake wrote that it appeared that until late 1969, after the school had survived another closure order by the health board, "the requirements of the health officers as to sanitary arrangements brought about considerable efforts" at the school.

After qualified approval had been given in late 1969, however, "it seems a more relaxed attitude prevailed at the school ... it is evident that the Zenonian dictum as to man's special genius lying in his capacity for repose became the guiding principle of those concerned with housekeeping at the establishment."

Drake wrote his judgment after a two-day hearing of the case Sept. 26 and 27. The health board was represented by lawyer Cecil Branson.

Close Enough to Poke Eye

That was how George Fraser of 1410 Wain Road, North Saanich, described Tuesday night how close a small pickup truck he was driving came to meeting a large old convertible head-on.

Fraser was testifying at the second session of an inquest into the deaths early Sept. 17 of Douglas Bruce Barkley, 24, of 3119 Rutledge, Saanich, and Dennis Robert Nels Halstrom, 25, of 971 Jasmine, Saanich, who were in a small car behind Fraser's.

The small car met head-on with the convertible on the Trans-Canada Highway about half a mile north of Thetis Lake Park.

Fraser told the six-man jury that he had just finished overtaking the station wagon on the northbound side of the road when he saw the southbound convertible approaching on the wrong side of the road.

He was able to swerve his vehicle aside.

Lawyer Kenneth Murphy, in cross-examination, established that the occupants of the convertible had been drinking before the crash. The inquest continues 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the Victoria Law Courts building.
